DITSON & CRANE,
Nov. 14.

The peculiar taint or infection which we call SCROFULA lurks in the blood, whence it produces a host of multitudes of men. It either produces or is produced by an enfeebled, vitiated state of the blood, wherein that fluid becomes incompetent to sustain the vital forces in their vigorous action, and leaves the system to fall into disorder and decay. The scrofulous contamination is variously caused by mercurial drugs, long living, disordered digestion from indolence, impure air, filth and filthy habits, the depressing vice, and above all, by the venereal infection. Whatever be its origin, it is hereditary in the constitution, descending from parents to children into the third and fourth generation. Indeed, it seems to be the rod of Him who says, "I will visit the iniquities of the fathers upon their children." The diseases which it originates take various names, according to the organs it attacks. In the lungs, Scrofula produces tubercles, and finally Consumption; in the glands, swellings which suppurate and become ulcersous sores; in the stomach and bowels, derangements which produce indigestion, dyspepsia, and liver complaints; on the skin, eruptive and cutaneous affections. These all having the same origin, require the same remedy, viz. purification and invigoration of the blood. Purify the blood, and these dangerous diseases will leave you. With feeble, foul, or corrupted blood, you cannot have health; with that "life of the flesh" healthy, you cannot have scrofulous disease.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

is compounded from the most effectual antidotes that medical science has discovered for this afflicting distemper, and for the cure of the disorders it entails. That it is far superior to any other remedy yet devised, is known by all who have given it a trial. That it does combine virtues truly extraordinary in their effect upon this class of complaints, is indisputably proven by the great multitude of publickly known and remarkable cures it has made of the following diseases: King's Evil or Glandular Swellings, Tumors, Eruptions, Pimples, Blisters and Sores, Erysipelas, Rose or St. Anthony's Fire, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Coughs from tuberculous deposits in the lungs, White Swellings, Debility, Dropsy, Neuralgia, Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Syphilis and Syphilitic Infections, Mercurial Diseases, Febrile Weaknesses, and, indeed, the whole series of complaints that arise from impurity of the blood. Minute reports of individual cases may be found in AYER'S AMERICAN ALMANAC, which is furnished to the druggists for gratuitous distribution, wherein may be learned the directions for its use, and some of the remarkable cures which it has made when all other remedies had failed to afford relief. Those cases are purposely taken from all portions of the country, in order that every reader may have access to some one who can speak to him of its benefits from personal experience. Scrofula deprives the vital energies, and thus leaves its victims more subject to disease and its fatal results than are healthy constitutions. Hence it tends to shorten, and does greatly shorten, the average duration of human life. The vast importance of these considerations has led us to spend more labor in perfecting a remedy which is adequate to its cure. This we now offer to the public under the name of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, although it is composed of ingredients, some of which exceed the best of Sarsaparilla in its efficacy. It is a remedy you may protect yourself from the suffering and danger of these disorders. Purge out the foul corruptions that rot and fester in the blood; purge out the causes of disease, and vigorous health will follow. By its peculiar virtues this remedy stimulates the vital functions, and thus expels the distempers which lurk within the system or burst out on any part of it.

We know the public have been deceived by many compounds of Sarsaparilla, that promised much and did nothing; but they will neither be deceived nor disappointed in this. Its virtues have been proven by abundant trial, and there remains no question of its surpassing excellence for the cure of the afflicting diseases it is intended to reach. Although under the same name, it is a very different medicine from any other which has been before the people, and is far more effectual than any other which has ever been available to them.

AYER'S

CHERRY PECTORAL,

The World's Great Remedy for Coughs, Colds, Incipient Consumption, and for the relief of Consumptive patients in advanced stages of the disease.

This has been so long used and so universally known, that we need do no more than assure the public that its quality is kept up to the best it ever has been, and that it may be relied on to do all it has ever done.

Where are the Heroes?

Mother Earth! are the heroes dead?

Do they thrill the heart of the cars no more?

Are the gleaming snows and the poppies red

All that is left of the brave of yore?

Are there none to fight as Theseus fought,

Far in the young world's misty dawn?

Or to teach as the mid-eyed Nestor taught?

Mother Earth! are the heroes gone?

Gone? In a grander form they rise!

Gone? We can clasp their hands in ours,

And light our path by their shining eyes,

And wreath their brows with immortal flowers.

Wherever a noble deed is done,

The pulse of a hero's heart is stirred;

Where right has ever a triumph won,

There are the heroes' voices heard.

Their armor rings on a nobler field

Than the Greek or Trojan everted,

For Freedom's sword is the blade they wield,

And the light above is the smile of God.

So, in hisisle of calm delight,

Jason may sleep his years away,

For the heroes live, and the skies are bright,

And the world is a braver world to-day.

Originally the term of human life was a thousand years—but that was before there was any quick doctors.

Dr. Johnson, at a late period of his life, observed to Sir Joshua Reynolds, if a man does not make new acquaintances as he advances through life, he will soon find himself left alone. A man, sir, should keep his friendship in constant repair.

You may shrink from the far reaching solitude of your heart, but no other foot than yours can tread them.

Handsome features alone are incapable of expressing real beauty, as speech alone is incapable of expressing wit.

The idle man is the devil's hireling, whose diet and wages are famine and disease.

The education of children may be defined as keeping them out of their mother's way, forenoon and afternoon, five days in the week.

If parents had the ability and tact to teach their children themselves, and would do it, ignorance and vice would not be so common in society.

It is well to write on the subject about which we have been reading. When we put our thoughts on paper, it is like turning our minds inside out. If we want to know what's in a purse, we pour the contents on the table; and then we can readily distinguish the coppers from the silver, and the silver from the gold.

Woman is like ivy—the more you are ruined the closer she clings to you. An old bachelor at our elbow adds, ivy is like woman—the closer she clings to you the more you are ruined.

Miscellaneous.

Wife Murder.

Be careful of her, Frank; love her and cherish her; she's a tender little blossom.

Old Mr. Millet turned away with two wet spots on his cheek, as he placed the lovely young bride in the travelling carriage that was to bear her away on the wedding tour.

Susy was his only child, and he gruded her sadly to the handsome fellow who stood there so proud and happy, his brown curls tossed about in the wind, and his brilliant dark eyes sparkling with gay excitement.

As if there was any danger of his loving her too little! said Frank Ashland, somewhat piqued by his father-in-law's expressive caution. There's a great deal more risk of my killing her with kindness.

And Susy's sweet, child-like laugh, was the last sound that struck her solitary father's ear as the carriage drove away. She never thought how true a word is often spoken in unconscious jest.

Didn't I see young Ashwin pass just now? said Charles Clair, as he lounged across the piazza of one of the great Saratoga hotels.

Yes; there he is this minute, just entering the saloon.

And did some one say he was married, or have I dreamed it?

It was a prophetic dream if you did! laughed his companion. He joined the order of Benedictines about a week ago; and upon my word and honor, Clair, I could find just such another little jewel of a woman-kind, I'd go and do like wise.

Why? yawned Mr. Clair. Is she any thing so very remarkable?

A peer! a rose bud! a white little lily of the valley! said his enthusiastic friend.

The prettiest creature I ever saw! There's only one objection—she's too ethereal! If I were Ashwin I would never trust her out of my sight for a moment, for fear she would vanish into a snow wreath.

Clair shrugged his shoulders rather doubtfully; but half an hour afterward, as Mrs. Ashwin tripped past, leaning lightly on her husband's arm, he was forced mentally to concede that James Medford had been right.

There were very few women as beautiful as that girl—bride, with peach-like bloom on her cheek, and the dewy, tremulous light in her lovely eyes.

Introduce me, that's a good fellow, Frank, whispered he, the first opportunity he could seize on. By Jove! you have discovered a jewel of the first water!

It was very pleasant to be the belle of every assemblage with which she mingled. Susy wondered and smiled at it with a sort of childish delight, but Frank was prouder and happier far. He loved to watch her innocent beauty, and to listen to her soft hesitating words.

Got tired yet my darling?

A little, Frank. You know we are up so late every evening here, and I am such a little country thing, unaccustomed to all these gay city habits.

But you must not talk of going yet, Mrs. Ashwin. Why it is hardly midnight! exclaimed Mr. Clair, you have promised me a quadrille, beside a waltz for Mr. Medford.

O, no, don't run away, my Susy, said her husband, gaily, and she hesitated and yielded.

With the winter came new festivities and excitement. Mrs. Ashwin's fame had preceded her to the metropolitan drawing-room, and she found herself more of a spoiled beauty than ever. She would rather have led a little more domestic life had her own secret inclination been consulted, but Frank was so proud of her, and she could not dissappoint him.

Don't put on that hideous woolen dress that comes up so close around your neck, Susy; it makes you look like a nun. That isn't suitable for a party. Put on the blue silk with the low neck. I am proud of those white shoulders of yours. There—now you look something like!

But I'm not so comfortable, Frank, said Mrs. Ashwin, with a slight shiver.

Throw on this ermine mantle, then. Never mind those thick shoes; you can run right across the pavement to the carriage in no time. I'll see that you don't get your feet wet. Throw a little rose, hey? Well, you can take a dose of medicine to-morrow, and I'll send Dr. Barclay.

Two or three days afterwards Mr. Ashwin came in and found his wife adjusting her velvet bonnet over the shining bands of hair he so admired.

You are not going out to-day, Susy?

I thought I would take a little walk, Frank. The doctor said I ought to have daily open air exercise, and—

Nonsense, he never meant that you should expose yourself on such a freezing morning as this. Take your things off again, and pile on some more coal if you want to keep warm. Women have so little judgment in some things.

Frank Ashwin came from his business rather earlier than usual that evening, and he was vexed and astonished to see how pale Susy looked; as if a close room and a red-hot grate were any substitute for the bracing air that sets the blood in a glow, and the muscles in a thrill.

My love, what ails you?

Only a little headache, Frank. You must go to Mrs. Clair's and carry my apologies. To-morrow I shall feel better.

And Ashwin went, very much discontented. Why, Ashwin, said the host as he entered the brilliant lighted rooms, where is your fair lady?

At home; she bade me bring you her regrets.

And what is the matter, pray?

O, I don't know; headache, and pain in the side, and all that sort of thing. I don't think she can tell herself exactly what ails her.

I can, said old Dr. Barclay, as the young husband passed by, with a troubled brow. He is killing her with kindness.

Killing her! what do you mean? said Mr. Clair, with a look of unqualified surprise.

Just what I say. I've been there a good deal lately, and I never saw any one so systematically injudicious as young Ashwin in regard to his wife. She must not walk out for fear she will take cold; she mustn't perform any little household duty; what does he keep half a dozen servants for? If she has no appetite at dinner-time, he knocks his kind, thoughtless head, against the cellar beams, hunting for bits of cold chicken, and mince pies to make nice little ten o'clock suppers—suppers that play the very mischief with a body's digestive apparatus. He buys her splendid velvet dresses, and takes her perforce to parties, because he believes in excitement. Why, Clair, this sort of thing is enough to break down a constitution of iron.

Well, why don't you reasonate?

Might as well talk to a stone wall; said the old doctor, turning abruptly away. Besides, I'm not altogether sure that it isn't already too late.

Not dying, doctor! No, no; you are surely mistaken. She isn't sick—nothing's the matter with her—she's only a little drooping.

Nothing is the matter with yonder sere leaf on the tree, Mr. Ashwin, yet none less certainly will it drift into the grave.

But you can save her, doctor; you must save her; and Ashwin caught the doctor's arm with a convulsive grip.

Nobody can save her, Ashwin; consumption has marked her for its fatal work. Make much of her while she remains with you, for it will be but a short time.

Frank Ashwin staggered back against the wall like one smitten by a deadly blow.

O, what can I say to her father, when he asks me for his child? he moaned, between his set teeth. What can I say? what can I say?

The old doctor walked away, muttering to himself.

Poor boy! I could not tell him it was all his own work. He'll find burden enough to bear, already, I fear.

Three months had slipped away; the apple blossoms were pink on all the hillsides, and the pale, sweet violets, were purpling every hollow. Nature never missed the one young flower that had perished in all the flush of spring-ide beauty.

You look very grave, doctor, said Medford, meeting the old man, as he paced silently along, his eyes bent on the ground and his hands clasped behind his back.

And well I may look grave, sir. I have just come from the funeral of the loveliest young creature that ever breathed.

Ah, you mean Mrs. Ashwin! said Medford, a shadow of gravity on his own countenance.

Poor thing! what an unaccountable dispensation of Providence that was.

Nonsense! shouted the old man, fairly losing patience. It was a clear case of wife-murder. Now, don't look so shocked young sir; I don't mean to say that Frank stabbed her, or cut her throat; but I do assert that he killed her with fashionable dress and fashionable parties, and ten thousand other fashionable follies. Poor fellow! he is heart-broken if ever man was—but he

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, April 2d, 1864.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

SOLDIERS' RECORD. The steamer Western Metropolis, having on board companies B. C. and D. of the 4th Mass. Cavalry, left Boston on Sunday last for Hilton Head. The following Quincy boys were aboard:—Asst. Surgeon Edward Russell, Capt. Joseph W. Morton, Joseph E. Bowditch, Michael Feuton, William W. Pratt, William Price, John Brown, Jr., John H. Dinegan, Isaac N. Forrester, William Sheehan, Timothy Daily, Samuel P. Caldwell and John Morgan.

The re-enlisted Veterans of the Eighteenth Mass. Regiment left Boston, for the seat of war on Tuesday afternoon. In their ranks were our townsmen John A. Pratt, James Chubbuck, Charles A. Nutting, John White, A. Perry Pope, Lorenzo Dow and Morton Packard.

A PAT BARRISTER. Quincy is noted for its great men—both physically and mentally. But we propose to speak at this time of one of our jolly, good-natured lawyers, who weighed one day last week on the Town's scales, two hundred and seventy odd pounds. We mean no other than Wm. S. Morton Esq., who has continued to increase a certain number of pounds each month for the last few years. We shall surely have a giant among us if our worthy friend continues to augment in the same ratio, for the next twenty years.

EUROPEAN TOUR. Hon. Francis M. Johnson and family of this town, left Boston on Wednesday last, in the Steamer Arabia, for England. We wish them a pleasant and prosperous voyage, and hope they will all return again to their native land, with renewed health.

EMPLOYMENT. It is currently reported about town that one of our exempted conscripts on reaching his home for dinner on Wednesday last, found instead of a good breakfast, a cold stove and a note from his "better half" stating that she had taken French leave, and before he read it she would be miles away, and it would be useless to pursue her. The above may be a mere joke.

A FAVORITE PLACE. We take pleasure in calling the attention of gentlemen of Quincy and vicinity to the Dining Saloon, No. 2 Spring Lane. Mr. Fuller, the present proprietor is a perfect gentleman, and knows well how to provide for the wants of the inner man. Don't forget, No. 2, Spring Lane.

MOUNT WOLLASTON BANK. At a special meeting of the Stockholders of this bank, held on the 21st ult., the Directors were authorized to change to a National Bank whenever they should deem it expedient.

The Mount Wollaston and Quincy Stone banks have declared semi-annual dividends of four per cent, payable Monday, April 4.

THE SOCIABLE. The entertainment given by the Spiritualists at the Town Hall on Thursday evening, notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather, attracted quite a respectable audience—between two and three hundred persons were present. Every thing passed off pleasantly. The play, tableaux, music, and all, were highly extolled; and the wish being general, it was concluded to repeat them on Monday evening next.

THE EQUINOCTIAL. We have had all kinds of weather during the week. The "Line Storm" commenced on Wednesday, and for forty-eight hours, or more, we were treated to snow, sleet, and rain, in such equal parts, that the ground was covered with a thick, half-congealed mass, which the pedestrian, at ankle deep, had to wade through. Our tubs are all full.

CONCERT AND BALL. We would call the attention of our citizens to the entertainment to be given by the Quincy Brass Band, on Fast night. The annual performances of our musical friends in this place, are of the first order—both chaste and interesting—well worthy of a large attendance. Alonzo Bond is director of the Band on the evening of the performance.

NEWMAN'S HARD TIMES COFFEE. Nothing we take so much pleasure in as a good cup of Coffee for breakfast. And in these times when we are obliged to submit to a substitute, we know of none we like so well as the Hard Times Coffee, manufactured by H. B. Newman, 36 South Market Street, Boston.

We often forget that it is not the real Old Java, for its quality is excellent.

THE LEGISLATURE. The bill allowing towns and cities to tax for the purpose of aiding in recruiting has passed both branches and received the Governor's signature. Its operation is confined to calls previous to the one last received, but an act covering this last is likely to be adopted in the future.

MR. JOHN B. BASS is out again. He is now so far recovered from his late painful operation, as to be able to make visits instead of receiving them.

Boston Correspondence.

Boston, March 31, 1864.
MISCELLANEOUS.

While events in the field are not of an important character, the re-organization of the army of the Potomac is the all absorbing topic of the day. Already of gigantic proportions, it is to be strengthened and concentrated. General Grant believes in concentration and in the Napoleonic principle of superior numbers at the point of collision. It is evident that the next great campaign is to be in Virginia and that the rebel capital must fall. The New York Herald in speaking of the war, the Presidency, and critical situation of the country, uses the following editorial:

"The impression in the public mind has widened and deepened until it has become a prevailing conviction that the grand military campaign upon which General Grant is about to enter will be decisive against the rebellion, or that it will bring disgrace and financial and political confusion upon the government and the loyal States. The national treasury, the whole financial system of the country, in all its ramifications, the unity of the loyal States, the harmony of their people, the life of the government itself, and all our political institutions, are now in the hands of General Grant and the armies under his command. With his success, our way will be clear before us for a new epoch of power and prosperity without a parallel in the history of any nation; but, in the event of a failure on his part to demolish or disperse the armies of the rebellion, who can tell us whether the Presidential election of November next will be decided by the ballot box or by force of arms?"

Mr. Bennett thinks that the Presidential campaign will be shaped from the results of General Grant's movements. He has high hopes in Grant's success; believing, however, that he has great difficulties to overcome; that he is to fight around a great circle, inside of which a rebel force of three hundred thousand men may possibly hold five hundred thousand at bay for a season at least.

A joint resolution is before both Houses of Congress to amend the Federal Constitution as to forever prohibit slavery and involuntary servitude in our land except for crime. Mr. Wilson of the Senate has spoken well in advocacy of the amendment, and a sketch of his speech appeared in the Boston Journal of Tuesday. The subject will be eloquently handled in Congress, but from present appearances the amendment will pass and go to the people. Then, says Mr. Wilson, in his closing remarks, "the nation regenerated and disenthralled by the genius of emancipation, will run the career of development, power and glory, quickened, animated and guided by the spirit of Christian Democracy, that pulls not the highest state but lifts the lowest up."

The matters of tax and banking are still under consideration by Congress. The question of finance has become one of the greatest magnitude at the present day. The effects of the National Bank Act is producing a redundancy of currency quite unexpected to the public. Money is found on every bush, and at low rates of interest, and business of all kinds good. But the more paper currency is inflated, the higher everything costs; and this is one evil of the working of the National Banking law. But with proper restrictions both in State and National legislation, many of its evils will be corrected. The Boston Traveller recommends a repeal of the banking law by Congress, and the establishment of an enormous taxation, which will absorb all the profits of business. This will hardly meet the present views of the community. Truly the finance question is a deep one. The severe easterly storm, commencing on Wednesday, has put a check upon business, giving the city quite a sombre appearance; and the places of public amusement not liberally patronized; the week has been still.

CULTIVATION OF TEA AND COFFEE. The cultivation of tea and coffee promises to be among the fixed facts in the industry of California. One nursery at Sacramento has five thousand coffee plants on trial, and it is believed that there will be no difficulty in bringing up the plant to a standard of hardness to weather the mild winter of that climate.

A CURIOUS FACT, illustrating the active character of our people under the most discouraging circumstances, is, that architectural plans have been recently prepared for an iron-clad church in Charlestown, Massachusetts.

GODLEY'S LADY'S BOOK for April has made its appearance. The contents of this number is of a rare order of excellence. The embellishments are in the best finish of the artist. The "Double Extension Plate" takes the lead, and opens the fashions of the season in fine style; here, spring, in her richest costume bursts upon you with dazzling beauty. "Keeping Company" is a picture to which you will be drawn, and over which you may dwell with growing interest. The literary department, as usual, abounds in good things, and furnishes most capital reading.

THE LADY'S FRIEND—Mrs. Peterson's new Monthly. The April number, which is before us, will compare favorably in interest and attractions with its elder sisters. The artist has adorned its pages with many rich gems. The fashions for the season have received special attention, with fine illustrated engravings; and the literary department, treats on subjects, attractive to the ladies, which entitles it to be classed as their friend.

THE POOR MAN'S FRIEND. Doctor's bills are too long for a poor man's pocket, but he may avoid them by keeping in his cupboard a box of Grice's Salve. If Tommy cuts his finger, or Mary scalds her hand, or Jacky bruises his toe, the Salve will cure them without sending for the physician. In winter it cures chilblains and frost-bites; in summer it removes tan and freckles, and all the year round it is a little box of blessing. Mother, don't forget to save your husband's hard earned money by buying a box of the universal Salve for 25 cents. See advertisement in another column.

Army of the Potomac.

The following note, from Lieut. Reed, was received by the Quincy Ladies' Soldiers' Aid Association, in acknowledgment of a box of articles sent to the Quincy boys of the 39th Regiment. If the fact, that our soldiers are pined to acts of higher duty, and more gallant daring, because they are remembered at home, then are their mothers, wives, sisters and friends most amply repaid for all that they may have done, or do, in behalf of those who have periled life and health for the honor of that old flag, whose starry folds shall soon wave over again a united and happy people.

CAMP NEAR MITCHELL'S STATION, VA.
MARCH 7TH, 1864.

Mrs. Wm. F. Whitney, President of the Ladies' Soldiers' Aid Association, Quincy, Mass.

"MADAM: I do not propose to thank you for the Members of Company D, because of the nice present you have sent them, for I believe they have taken that pleasure to themselves; but I write this note, to let you know of the safe arrival of the box and contents, all in good order; and you may be assured, that a hearty reception welcomed its arrival. Had you, and those interested in preparing the articles, been able to look into our Camp last Saturday night, you would have noticed quite a commotion in the street and quarters of the Quincy boys; you would have seen many a familiar face, covered with smiles; heard many a familiar voice speak in glowing terms of the Ladies of Quincy; and as they tried on their night caps, and lighted their cigars, many a merry laugh, and pleasant word would have reached your ears; and had you lingered till later in the evening, you would have seen these men gathered about their fires, or lying in their bunks, looking over Quincy papers; talking about the folks at home, or writing to some friend in Quincy about the presents that had been received."

"Had these men who have been so long away from home and friends, ever felt that they were forgotten by friends at home, they now have discovered their mistake. And the mothers, sisters and wives, and friends of the Quincy men, may feel assured, that the ties of love, and affection, have been strengthened by this last act of theirs!"

"It is not the value of these presents that has strengthened their love; but 'tis the fact that they are not forgotten! And allow me to say to you, and the Members of your Association, that nothing so cheers a soldier's heart, and makes him so determined to do his duty faithfully, as the knowledge that he is thought of by those he loves at home."

"Every member of Company D, that is present with us, has received the articles sent to him. Those in Company H, of which Charles Hunt is Captain, have not been forgotten; and as fast as practically, the absent shall receive their share. Sergeant Barker assisted the officers in the distribution, and I trust that every thing will have been done in a manner which will meet with the approval of yourself and the Members of the Association."

"Allow me, for myself, to thank you for the kindness you have shown to the Members of the Company, and I shall ever be with much respect,

Yours, &c.,
JOHN D. REED,
Lieutenant of Co. D.
For the Patriot.
An Older House.

The house of Governor Cradock, is said to have been erected in Medford in 1640. That of Mr. Edmund Quincy, fronting on a brook that falls into the sea north of Mount Wollaston must have been built in 1635, as he died in 1636—aged 33 years. It remains in good preservation in 1864. The son and grandson of Mr. Quincy, erected a spacious mansion nearer the brook, and the first edifice was converted into a farm house to which purpose it has since been appropriated.

The lands assigned to Mr. Coddington and Mr. Quincy in 1635—6 by the town of Boston and purchased by them of Chickatabos, the Sachem of the Massachusetts Indians comprehended several thousand acres, and included the peninsula now called German-town. The cellar of Mr. Coddington's house on the hill north of the brook was visible a few years since but is now nearly obliterated by the turnpike which passes near it.

In Keene, (N. H.), March 27th, Mr. Gideon P. Thayer, aged 71 years.

Mr. Thayer was the founder of the Chauncy Hall School, Boston, and for many years a most successful teacher. At one time he was editor of this paper, and a resident of this place.

Rebecca, Rosa and Charlie, redeemed slaves, will visit Quincy on Tuesday evening next, and we doubt not that our citizens will give them as cordial and enthusiastic a reception as they are enjoying in our neighboring towns and cities. Apart from the interest attaching to these children themselves,—being children of well-known Southern gentlemen of the "first families"—the cause they represent appeals to all philanthropic and Christian hearts. The exercises on Tuesday evening will be held in the Hancock street Church, and free to all. Each one however will be invited to contribute to the cause of the Educational Commission, under whose patronage these and many other redeemed slaves are now receiving their literary and religious training.

Carte de Visites.

I'm loved and admired,
Adored and desired,
And by many I might be obtained,
If they seek the right place,
They'll find beauty and grace,
But if not, it will all be in vain.

'Tis the countenance sweet,
On the Carte de Visite,
And it must be just as we take them;
'Tis the lustre of charms,
That the cold heart disarms,
But 'tis Heaven alone that can make them.

Ladies, pass not by us;
Gents, step in and try us;
Where we hope by our attentions and skill,
Your graces to unfold,
Your patronage to hold,
And our duty to the public fulfil.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.
Childhood's Home—
BY C. F. HOBART.

There is music in the gentle breeze,
As it falls upon my ear,
There is magic in the sound of home,
That I hold dearer;
There is rapture in the silent grove,
There is pleasure on the sea,
But the sweetest spot on earth beside,
Is childhood's home to me.

And I love that quiet homestead,
Where so many happy hours
I have spent amid the foliage,
Among the birds and flowers;
Where my brothers and my sisters,
In the pebbled walks did play,
With tones of glee, ringing out so free,
Throughout each summer day.

And I love that gentle father,
Whose heart beats fond and free,
For the children that in infancy,
Played round that parent knee;
Hope's brightest flowers bedeck our way,
And in our hearts doth reign,
That we may meet as oft of yore,
And live them o'er again.

And, too, that blessed mother—
She's the star to guide my way
Unto the heavenly portals,
Of that never fading day;
And her blessings o'er shall lead me,
When this storm of life is o'er,
To our Father's glittering mansion,
On Heaven's eternal shore.

And, Oh! where are the brothers
That lately sought our bowers?
Have they like fragile things of earth,
Perished with the summer flowers?
One seeks Virginia's sunny land,
And two transplanted are in Heaven,
In paradise to bloom.

My loving sisters—two, and all,
Forgotten cannot be,
While memory, like a spell of love,
Closes flitting back to me;
In dreams, I see that childhood's home,
Fast through my falling tears—
And weep that such changes come,
In such short space of years.

Quincy, March 21st, 1864.

A Name.

Make to thyself a name,
Not with the breath of clay,
Which, like the broken, hollow reed,
Doth hide itself away;
Not with the fame that vanes
The tyrant on his throne,
And hurls its stigma on the soul
That God vouchsafes to own.

Make to thyself a name,
Not such as wealth can weave,
Whose warp is but a thread of gold
That dazzles to deceive;
Not with the tints of love,
- Form out its letters fair—
That scroll within thy hand shall fade,
Like him who placed it there.

Make to thyself a name,
Not in the captured aisle—
The marble oft betrays its trust,
Like Egypt's lofty pile;
But ask of Him who quell'd
Of death, the victor-strife,
To write in the blood-bought page
Of everlasting life.

Anecdotes.

A lawyer, the other day, went into one of our barber shops to procure a wig. In taking the dimensions of the lawyer's head, the boy exclaimed:

Why, how long your head is, sir.

Yes, replied our worthy friend, we lawyers must have long heads.

The boy proceeded to his vocation, but at length exclaimed:

Lord, sir, your head is thick as it is long.

I don't know what you mean by not being an Irishman, said a gentleman who was hiring a boy, you say you were born in Ireland.

Och, your honor, if that's all, said the boy, small blame to that. Suppose your cat was to have kittens in the oven would they be loaves of bread?

Aunt Rosy, was dividing a mince pie among the boys, and when Jim, who had wickedly pulled the cat's tail, asked for his share, the dame replied:

No, Jim, you are a wicked boy, and the Bible says there is no peace for the wicked.

A poor Irish laborer had an impediment in his speech, and could not pronounce words beginning with the letter P without stammering. A neighboring gentleman, seeing him digging potatoes, and wishing to make him ridiculous, said: "What do you call these things you're digging?"

Sir, says poor Pat, I don't call them; when I want them I fetch them.

A gentleman, on leaving a hotel where he had been stopping several days, rewarded the attention of an obliging servant with a handsome gratuity.

Ah! said the grateful Patrick, long may your honor live, and may I make your fires hereafter.

Why is a belle like a locomotive? Because she throws off the sparks, transports the mails, (males) and says to the tender—pine knot.

Miscellaneous.

A Settler's Exploit.

As Samuel Bowditch, one of the early settlers on Grand River, Kentucky, was going across a patch of swamp, one afternoon, about half a mile from his dwelling, to look after some cattle, he heard a stick snap behind him, and turning quickly around, found himself confronted by a huge savage, in all the hideousness of his war paint, and with his rifle or musket levelled at his head, the muzzle not more than four feet from him. Bowditch himself had a rifle in his hand, but he knew the Indian could shoot him before he could raise it and fire. He did not make the attempt, but immediately dropping it to the ground and held up his palms, in token of submission.

On seeing this, the savage walked up and said:

I see you're a big chief, and I hope we may be good friends.

Where live! asked the savage, as he produced a stout thong of deer skin, and proceeded to bind the hands of his captive, who,

being a small man, saw he was no match for the other, even without weapon on either side, and so submitted quietly, though agoniized at the thought of his poor helpless wife and children, in their lonely cabin over the hill.

I lived out yonder, not a great way from here, replied the captive, nodding his head in the proper direction.

How many got? queried the savage.

The settler hesitated about telling correctly.

He first thought he would name a number large enough to deter the Indian from entering a certain cave not more than a half a mile distant, where he could, by following

one of the labyrinthian passages within, come out on the same side into a thicket not more than fifty feet from the main opening.

Looking back occasionally as he fled along his rocky way with the ease of a mountain goat. Bowditch soon discovered that he was superior to him in speed in that particular locality, and this not only inspired him with confidence in his own resources, but he began to calculate in turn how he might best compass the destruction of his foe.

Why not lure him into the cave, he muttered, and let him feel his time round that while I start after my rifle, and follow up the audacious whelp? I'll do it; and if I don't get even with him, then it's a clear case fortin's against me.

Having come to this determination, Bowditch slackened his pace till his pursuer was in full view, when he pretended to stumble and fall, and then got up and ran fiercely;

when the Indian encouraged by this mishap, redoubled his exertions to overtake him. This was exactly what he intended to bring about,

and he now managed his pace with so much deception, that, though seeming to exert himself to the utmost, he permitted the panting savage to gain a little every minute, at which time not more than a hundred paces divided the Indian saw the fugitive disappear in the dark opening, and believing that he now had him secure once more, he came up and plunged in after him with a yell of triumph.

The settler, who knew every twist and turn of every passage in the cave—and there were many—now uttered a wailing groan from the centre, to urge the Indian on, and then quietly slipped off in a different direction, and reached the bright open air about the same time the other did the middle of the interior.

Now then for it, muttered Bowditch, as he slipped over the brow of the hill and ran towards his dwelling, which, owing to the ridge bending round the valley in the shape of a magnet, or horse shoe, was scarcely as far distant as when he called to his wife.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, April 9th, 1864.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

Photographs.

Art, by the genius of Daguerre, has become the faithful mirror of Nature. A duplicate or transcript of ourselves and friends can now be secured with perfect accuracy, and preserved in enduring colors. The Carte de Visite, so called, a late improvement of the art, substituting vellum or paper for more costly materials, enables the artist to multiply these pictures, ad infinitum, and at a trifling expense. They are light, and can be transmitted through the mail with the ease and safety of a letter. This has given rise to a custom—a very laudable one—of securing enough at a sitting for home consumption, and to distribute among friends. Honoring the example for its social influence, we expressed a wish to our subscribers to be remembered in the distribution; and we are happy to say that we have not been forgotten. The photographs of Mr. Buesler and lady, were very acceptable presents; they are truly life like; in every lineament, we recognized the well-known features of those whom we had learned to respect and esteem. That of Mr. T., also, our village pastor, was a fine expression—an exact likeness of the man and student, as he sits, in his studio, in an apparent meditative mood. And friend Brackett's—the face could not be mistaken; cheerful and happy looking as ever—he is a fair representation of one of our solid men. We could mention others, but time will not permit. For these, and the others we are expecting to receive, we return our sincere thanks. Our album is fast filling up, still, we have room for more.

SOLDIERS' RECORD. Our townsmen, Adam Algeo, William Hodgkinson, George W. Basley and James Kelly, Jr., of Co. I, 1st Heavy Artillery, (formerly 14th Mass. Reg.) arrived home on Monday last on a thirty days furlough, having re-enlisted for three years, on the Quincy quota. These heroes are entitled to the gratitude of our citizens for their self denial in spurning the bribe of $125.00 offered them by a neighboring town, which was accepted by a few of their comrades. They preferred to hail from their own home and trust to the liberality of its fellow citizens, who have not since the breaking out of the rebellion been behind one town in the Commonwealth in rewarding its heroes.

ANOTHER SELF DENING HERO. Mr. John P. Brown, of Co. I, 30th Mass. Regiment, arrived home a few days since on a thirty days furlough, having re-enlisted on the Quincy quota.

PROGRESS. The Orthodox Society of this town have voted to remodel their house of worship on Hancock street. It is proposed to raise the edifice and move it back; building a new vestry, and placing a new spire on the church, with other alterations. The work will begin during the spring or early summer.

A GOOD TIME. The entertainment repeated at the Town Hall, on Monday evening last, was very interesting. The play—Grimsby, Bagshaw and Bradshaw—was one of the best performed pieces we have ever seen in Quincy. The actors and actresses did their parts exceedingly well, and received loud applause. The tableaux were good, and everything connected with the entertainment passed off pleasantly.

GOOD SUCCESS. We are pleased to learn that our young and enterprising merchants, Messrs. Dison & Crane, sold during the last month, at their store near the Post Office, over nine hundred dollars worth of flour. This seems almost incredible when we stop to consider that there are ten or twelve other grocery stores in this place who keep flour for sale, besides the large grain, flour and meal establishment near the depot. We have come to the conclusion that the article kept by our young merchants must give pretty good satisfaction or they could not have disposed of such a quantity.

NORFOLK AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY. The annual meeting of this Society, was held at Dedham, on the 30th ult. We find the names of the following gentlemen among the Board of Trustees, for the ensuing year. Quincy—Joseph W. Robertson, Lemuel Billings, Charles A. Spear, Jacob F. Estlin. Weymouth—James Jones, Albert Tirrell, John W. Loud, James Humphrey.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DROWNING. On Sunday, a man named Moore went out upon the marsh near Savin Hill, Dorchester, but the tide, which was coming in, soon cut off his retreat to the main land. The water also covered the marsh and rose higher and higher until it reached his chin, when he was saved from drowning by Capt. Barker, who put off in a boat to his relief. When taken off Moore was completely chilled and exhausted.

BOSTON, APRIL 6, 1864.

Another week has passed quietly as to war news. Advice from the army of the Potomac assure us that by reason of a seven days' continuance in the roads and camps in Virginia, are in a frightful condition. It will require a month of sunshine to enable our troops to move, and that the spring campaign may be thrown into summer. It is evident that a new line of tactics is to be pursued by General Grant. Richmond may be attacked on several sides. General Butler from Fort Monroe to have an important part. Hints have been thrown out that the enrolled militia of the United States may all be called out for a limited period to co-operate at and near Washington in a speedy suppression of the rebellion, by acting as a reserve during the advance of General Grant's army into Virginia. The administration has a vigilant eye on the defenses of Washington and a half million of raw troops is adequate for the purpose. The only news from the Southwest of importance is, that Vicksburg is threatened by invasion from the rebels.

In the mean time, the action of Congress is daily growing more interesting. The re-affirmation of the Monroe doctrine in the House of Representatives the present week by a unanimous vote, will produce no little excitement in London and Paris. The Monroe doctrine simply means that the United States will not tolerate the erection of any new monarchial government, at least in any part of North America, and the principle has been carried out from Mr. Monroe's administration to the present day. It is not probable that this action of Congress will change the ambitious projects of the Emperor of France, or prevent his son Friday, Prince Maximilian, from mounting the Mexican throne the coming summer. "The surest way," says the New York Express, "to maintain the Monroe doctrine—nay, the only way to keep the crowned heads from this Continent—is to bring our rebellion to a close by every honorable means as soon as possible, and thereby restore peace and fraternity at home. Nothing else will do. In Union there is strength; and the despots of the Old World are not in the habit of respecting any republic or any government that is not sure to be strong." The Committee of Ways and Means in Congress are about to report a new revenue bill. No decision has been made respecting the tax on spirits, tobacco and petroleum. The majority of the Committee favor heavy taxation. Secretary Seward recommended to the Select Committee on Immigration the passage of a new law, encouraging immigration. He proposes to advance money to poor emigrants sufficient to encourage the expenses of ocean transit; a reduction of the tonnage duties on emigrant ships; only one year for naturalization, and no military duty. The recent State election in Connecticut caused great rejoicing in Washington. These Union triumphs in the State elections for several months achieved by the combined action of Democrats and Republicans, must satisfy the rebel government that sympathy for them in the Free States is lessening to a corporal's guard. The North and West will fight forever rather than allow the secession of the South by force of arms. The patriot should rise above the politician in this great conflict of freedom against despotism. Stand by the flag to the last.

LETTER. The morning news informs us of the total defeat of the National Bank or currency bill, by a two-thirds vote of the House of Representatives in Congress; astonishing both friends and foes by this unexpected result. Quid nunc? for the future, The Rhode Island State election yesterday, went Union. The election for members to the Maryland Constitutional Convention, resulted in the choice of a majority yesterday of twenty delegates for immediate and unconditional emancipation. To-day being Fast, business is suspended, and the city has the appearance of Sunday.

WHITE SLAVES. Notwithstanding the disagreeable weather Tuesday evening, a large audience assembled at the Hancock St. Church. The songs and recitations drew forth the warmest applause. The narrative of Charles's imprisonment was told in an off hand way and his allusions to General Butler and Banks were received with great enthusiasm. Charles is a lawyer's son and intends to be a minister. He is a great-nephew of Stonewall Jackson. Rosa's father is Capt. Downs of the rebel navy, and Rebecca's is Gen. Huger of the rebel army. They are charming children.

DANGEROUS ADVERTISING. We know a man who does the principle part of his advertising by writing his name and business on the back of bank-bills. Perhaps he is not aware that, in case those banks whose notes he thus endorses were to break, he could be held responsible for the face of the note. Courts have so decided in similar cases.

BEST TIME TO PAINT HOUSES. Experiments have indicated that paint on surfaces exposed to the sun will be much more durable if applied in autumn or spring, than if put on during hot weather. In cold weather it dries slowly, forms a hard, glossy coat, tough like glass; while if applied in warm weather, the oil strikes into the wood, leaving the paint so dry that it is rapidly beaten off by rains.

PROGRESS. In 1854, there were but about sixteen nurseries for the growth and sale of fruit and ornamental trees in all the United States, and few embraced over ten to fifteen acres of ground. Now, the nurseries are counted in hundreds, and the acres occupied by some of them vary from two to three hundred.

A VISITOR. Mr. John B. Bass paid us a visit at our sanctum, yesterday. He is fast recovering his health; and when he gets on to his artificial limb, which he is now having made for him, he will be almost as smart as the best of us.

COTTON SPECULATORS. It is currently reported in New Orleans that the military operations now going on in Louisiana will result in the shipment of large quantities of cotton to New Orleans, and so sanguine were the cotton speculators that an offer of $2500 was made for the privilege of leaving New Orleans as an authorized correspondent of a Northern paper.

CLAIMS FOR PENSIONS. The claims for pensions already filed by widows and mothers exceed one hundred and fifty thousand. It is anticipated that about half that actually exist have been presented. The claims already audited and allowed amount to about twelve million of dollars per annum. Suppose, then, that but half that exist at this time have been presented, it leaves but a fair inference that it will require twenty-five millions of dollars per annum, to pay our pension roll alone in the years that are to come. In the case of widows, the pension ceases if the party marries.

OUR REVOLUTIONARY VETERANS. There are now living but twelve soldiers of the Revolution, to whom Congress passed a vote of thanks on the 4th instant, also adding one hundred dollars per annum to each of their pensions.

VERMONT SCHOOL JOURNAL. We have received the March number of this periodical. The articles are well written, and are devoted to the educational interests of the State. It is published by Hiram Orcutt, at West Brattleboro, Vt. for $1.00 a year in advance.

FOREIGN COTTON. The cultivation of cotton in Peru is said to be increasing.

CURRIERS AND TANNERS. Nasty sores on the hands and arms prevail among those who have to handle raw hides; even Erysipelas has been the consequences. In both cases a free application of GRACE'S SALVE will speedily repair the mischief. If the Erysipelas be very violent, cooling drinks should be given in conjunction with it.

THE ANNUAL CONCERT AND BALL of the Quincy Brass Band, at the Town Hall, on Thursday—Fast evening, was one of the crowning features of the day. A fashionable turn-out! worthy the occasion, and the meritorious corps, in whose honor it was tendered. Five hundred, at least, of the elite of our community were present. The Band never appeared to better advantage, or discoursed more melodious music. The vocal part of the performance was well executed; in fine, it was one of the most successful social gatherings of the season—closing with a ball—which was kept up with untiring interest until the grey dawn.

A MAN OF REGULAR HABITS. Mr. William Lawrence of Falmouth, who has reached the advanced age of eighty-six years, owns a meadow lot in that place which he has mowed regularly for seventy successive years, eating his dinner farmer-like, in the field. He might pass now, scythe in hand, for "Old Time" himself.—New Bedford Mercury.

Poetry.

To the Ladies.

Sweet ladies beware,
Nor be caught in the snare
Of Cupid, that artful deceiver;
He wins to betray,
Then Butters away,
Some new one to conquer, and leave her.

When roving he goes
From talp to rose,
Like a butterfly sunning his wing;
Gaze not with delight
On his plumage so bright,
Toss him not—or beware of his sting.

When smiling, or weeping
On flowery beds sleeping,
Or in ambush he's lurking below;
Trust not the sly boy,
For 'tis all a decoy,
Ready bent in his hand is the bow.

Though blind are his eyes,
Ere long he'll find his way;
That arrow bedewed with his kisses;
Take heed of your heart,
For when Love aims the dart
No archer so seldom misses.

Beware lest his smile
Your fancy beguile,
His weeping seduce you to pity;
List not to his song,
Or you'll find before long
What danger may lurk in the ditty.

Though infant he seems,
The maiden who deems
That the archer can do her no harm;
Too late will deplore
Being caught in his lure,
And the good of the baby-god's arm.

Good Old Names.

Of old a "spade" was called a "spade"
By simple and by sage;
A "workman" did his honest "work,"
And "servants" earned their "wages."
A "man" was title of respect,
Whenever virtue named it;
There was but one of higher worth,
And lovely "woman" claimed it;
But now we masquerade with words,
The truth a great offence is,
And debase our English tongue
By pride and false pretences.

We shun the language of our sires—
We talk so mild and meekly;
We're "operative" for workingman,
And draw our "salaries" weekly,
Our "lady" takes the place of "wife"—
The word was true and hearty;
And every "man's" a "gentleman,"
Unless we call him "party,"
The "shopman" hates the name of shop,
And by perversion later,
The man who digs a railway trench
Is called a "navigator."

O give us back our honest speech,
It has a soul of beauty;
And let us do our daily "work,"
And think it pleasant duty;
Let's earn our "wages" as of yore—
The word can never harm us;
Let's love our "sweethearts" and our "wives,"
And own that "women" charm us;
So shall our actions, like our words,
Be void of affectation;
And "spade" be "spade," and "man" be "man,"
Throughout the Yankee nation.

True Knowledge.

He nothing knows, who knows not this,
That earth can yield no lasting bliss,
No settled portion give;
He all things knows, who knows to place
His hopes on Christ's redeeming grace,
Who died that we might live.

Anecdotes.

Pa, has the world got a tail? asked an urchin of his father.

No, child, replied the old man, impatiently, how could it have one when it is round?

Well, persisted the boy, why do the papers say, so wage the world, if it aint got a tail to wag about?

Your ma says you, remarked the nonplussed daddy.

On a late ascension of an aeronaut, a gentleman requested to be allowed to accompany him into the upper regions.

Are you good tempered? asked the aeronaut.

I believe so, said the other; but why do you ask?

For fear we may fall out on the way.

An old soldier, whose nose had been leaped off by a bullet cut, happened to give a few pence to a beggar, who exclaimed in return: God preserve your eyesight!

Why so? inquired the veteran.

Because, sir, was the reply, if your eyes should grow weak, you couldn't keep your spectacles before them!

An Irish gentleman hearing of a friend having a stone coffin made for himself, exclaimed: By me sowl, an' that's a good idee! Shure, an' a stone coffin 'ud last a man his life time!

DENTISTRY.

THE Undersigned have associated themselves

together in the practice of Dental Surgery,

at the old office of Dr. S. Stocking, No. 19 Tremont Row, Boston. We are prepared to do the best of work in every department of our profession, and on the most REASONABLE TERMS. We shall give special attention to filling Decayed

Teeth in the most thorough and approved manner. In addition to setting teeth in gold and silver, we will bestow special pains in mounting whole and half sets on Vulcanized Rubber cases—a mode of adapting artificial teeth to the mouth, so universally popular, as to have almost entirely superseded the use of gold and other precious metals for that purpose. The Rubber base

being less expensive than gold and silver, brings

the price down to the reach of persons of limited

means. We flatter ourselves that an experience

of twenty-five years will secure to our patrons

peculiar advantages, as well in the quality of our work as in the terms we offer them. The use of Ether will be continued in our practice, and administered in the most judicious and scientific manner.

A Little Grave.

A little grave where daisies grow;

A little body lying low;

That is all the world may know.

But in our hearts we Hold a baby sweet and fair,

A little child with sunny hair,

Child of tenderest love and care—

Minnie, Minnie!

In the sweet spring of her day,

We gave her to the lonely clay,

From our tear-dimmed eyes away.

How we loved her none can tell;

They who have loved like us, well

Loved and lost, alone may tell—

Minnie, Minnie!

Wistful shadows in her eyes,

Like the dreamy haze that lies

Trembling in the summer skies;

And the burden of a fear,

All unspoken, yet so near,

Fell on us that weary year—

Minnie, Minnie!

Shrinking from the children's glee;

Keeping close to mother's knee;

Or in arms that tenderly

Watched her fading, faded she—

Faded she, our blossom fair,

Our little child with sunny hair,

Child of tenderest love and care—

Minnie, Minnie!

Scraps.

There are those who can make the silence of their closets more beneficial to the world than all the noise of courts, senates and camps.

Our thoughts, like the waters of the sea,

when exhorted towards heaven; will lose all their bitterness and saltiness, and sweeten in to an amiable humanity, until they descend

in gentle showers of love and kindness upon our fellow men.

No life can be well ended that has not been well spent; and what life has been well spent that has had no purpose—that has accomplished no object—that has realized no

We cannot all of us be beautiful, but the pleasantness of a good humored look is de-denied to none. We can all of us increase and strengthen the family affections and the delights of home.

Probably the reason why so little was written in the Dark Ages, was that the people could not see to write.

Teach your children early to speak the truth on all occasions. If you allow them to shuffle or deceive in small matters, they will soon do it in greater, till all reverence for truth is lost.

It is useless to talk about love in a cottage.

The little rascal always runs away when there is no bread and butter on the table.

There is more love in a full flour barrel than in all the roses and posies and woodbines that ever grew.

One ounce of pulverized borax, put into one quart of boiling water, and bottled for use, will be found invaluable for removing grease spots from woollen goods.

While we are working, a little fellow opposite our window is stealing a plank from a

Miscellaneous.

If My Husband were to Do So!

Poor woman! What a thousand pities it is for her; said Mrs. Grimes, with feeling. I wonder how she stands it. If my husband were to act so it would kill me.

I could never stand it in the world, added

Mrs. Pitts. It's a dreadful situation for a woman to be in. Mr. Perkins used to be one of the best of men, and took the best possible care of his family. For ten years there had not been a happier woman in the town than his wife, but now it makes one's heart sick to look at her. Oh! it must be one of the most heart-rending things in the world to have a drunken husband.

Well, all I've got to say, spoke up Mrs.

Peters with warmth, is, that I don't pity her much.

Why, Mrs. Peters! How can you talk so?

Well, I don't. Any woman who will live with a drunken husband don't deserve pity.

Why don't she leave him?

That is easier said than done, Mrs. Peters.

I should think it a great deal easier to leave than to live with a drunken brute, and have my life tormented out of me. If my husband were to do so, I reckon he and I would part before twenty-four hours.

Now Mrs. Peters' husband was a most excellent man, and a sober man withal; and his wife was tenderly attached to him. In regard to his ever becoming a drunkard, she has as little fear as of his running off and leaving her. Still, when she made this last remark, she looked toward him, (for he was present) with a stern and significant expression on her countenance. This was not really meant for him, but for the imaginary individual, she had supposed as bearing the relation toward her of a drunken husband.

You would, would you? Mr. Peters responded to the warmly expressed resolution uttered by his wife.

Yes, that I would! half laughingly and half seriously, retorted Mrs. Peters.

You don't know what you are talking about, spoke Mrs. Grimes.

Indeed, then, I do! I consider any woman

a fool who will live with a drunken husband.

For my part, I have not a spark of sympathy

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

THE STORM. Almost every paper which we take up has some remark or comment to make about the storm. One, that the "oldest inhabitant," has no recollection of such a continuous run of unpleasant weather. Another, that the seasons appear to have changed—winter into summer. And a late Lynn paper thus discourses of its effects in that quarter: it says—the storm on Tuesday of last week, for its violence, has no parallel in these parts, for over a quarter of a century; the sea in the bay is represented to have been heavier than had been known for many years; and the beacon, near Phillips Point, Swampscott, twenty-seven feet long and two feet thick, of solid stone, was broken in the centre by the pressure of the waves; it had withstood the raging elements for thirty-seven years, but was forced to yield at last. At the South Shore, also, its course was not more gentle; fortunately, Minot's Light, this time, weathered the gale; but the spray, which arose from the boiling flood, which was forced upon its rocky base, by the violence of the wind, was thrown over the top of the structure, to a height of near a hundred feet. When Old Ocean, in an angry mood, attempts to lash himself into a calm against our rocky coast, the scene is awful and grand; and those having the opportunity are desirous of witnessing the spectacle; this was the case on the present occasion; the Black Rock House and other places of resort were crowded with visitors. It would seem, from this, as if we were in the midst of a Siberian winter, instead of a genial month of spring. The prospects of a floral festival on the first of May, are not very promising. Cold, northeast winds, of over three weeks' duration, and frequent falls of snow, are not likely to bring forth early flowers.

FORTUNATE. The prize steamer Pet, which was sold at auction in East Boston, on Friday week, was purchased by Mr. Henry H. Faxon, of this town, in company with another gentleman, for $35,000, with the intention of letting her to the government; but a day or two afterwards finding a purchaser, who was willing to give $40,000, concluded to sell her. The gentlemen make over two thousand dollars each, on the vessel after paying all expenses. It surprises us, at times, when we stop to think what piles—thousands and thousands—our townsmen have made during the last few years by speculation. Everything he purchases seems to turn a fortune. Mr. Faxon has become one of the richest men among us. But we take more pleasure in knowing that Mr. F. has a generous heart, for this is what makes the man. It is not his money, for there are many among us who have money enough, if they only knew it, but it is his great and noble donations, which speak louder than words.

MISSIONARY. We learn that Geo. Newcomb, Esq., of Dedham, a native of this place, and well known by many of our citizens, has accepted an invitation to go to Beaufort, South Carolina, as teacher of Freedmen, for one year, by an urgent request of the inhabitants of his town. He is to have charge of that district, there being quite a number of female teachers there at the present time. The Government pays his expenses out and back, and finds him in clothing and rations the same as the soldiers. The citizens of Dedham have raised a very handsome salary for him besides. He leaves for New York on Monday next.

We think the citizens of D. have made a good selection; believing they could not have found a better man for the place, had they looked the State through. His noble, generous countenance, cannot help making him friends wherever he goes.

MARINE DISASTER. The Schooner Dean, from this town, for Fort Monroe, loaded with granite, was run into a few miles N. Northwest of Absecon, by the Schooner W. S. Baker, from Narragansett, for Boston, striking her on the port-bow, and causing her to sink in three hours. Her captain and crew, five in all, were taken off by the W. S. B. and carried to New York. The W. S. Baker had her stem damaged and mangled gear carried away. The Dean was owned in Provincetown, was fourteen years old, and ninety-eight tons burthen.

SPRING. The splendid Steamer which runs between Boston and Hingham during the summer season, commences its regular trips on Monday next. Those wishing to enjoy a fine sail in Boston Harbor, can do so by taking an excursion on this boat.

SEEDS. We would call the attention of those wishing to purchase vegetable, grain, or flower seeds to the establishment of Messrs. Breck & Son, Nos. 51 and 52 North Market Street, Boston. Their advertisement can be found in our columns to-day. Their stock is very extensive and is probably the most reliable of any offered in Boston, having been raised by themselves.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, APRIL 14, 1864.

BUSINESS. For three weeks past the unfavorable weather, has been prejudicial to business movements, and many branches have been limited in their operations. The stock market, however, has been feverish and irregular; giving rise to different opinions as to the future prospects of the financial situation. Some operators keep close to the shore, while others, more confident, venture into deeper waters. Government papers are strong, which is a good sign. With continued confidence in national securities, all branches of enterprise will grow active and remunerative.

WAR MATTERS. The number of men in the service of the United States is enormously large and of a high order; more so than at any former period since the breaking out of the rebellion. A combination of action under General Grant, all that is wanted to drive the rebel forces to the Gulf of Mexico. The quietude and apparent inactivity of General Grant's large army are indicative that a great conflict is near which will drive the enemy from the "sacred soil" to narrower bounds, virtually ending the war the coming summer. The prospects of success for the Federal cause are in the highest degree encouraging.

CONGRESS. The recent debates in the House of Representatives have been more exciting than at any other time since the commencement of the war. The discussions of fever heat character, grew out of the consideration of resolutions offered for the expulsion of Mr. Long of Ohio, and Harris of Maryland, for secession speeches. The principal feature of debate, says the New York Herald, "was the extraordinary speech of Mr. Harris of Maryland, who went as much beyond what Mr. Long had said as that gentleman, Friday, exceeded the reasonable utterances heretofore indulged in by Mr. Harris during the present session. So outrageous did he become in his denunciation of the loyal people of the United States, and of the efforts which have been and are making for suppression of the rebellion, and in his defence of the rebels and aspirations for their success, that he was called to order and permission refused him to proceed with his blasphemous treason." Such speeches like those of Mr. Harris and Long, bid fair to destroy the remainder of the once great and Democratic party. Treasonable sentiments uttered on the floor of Congress will injure any political party. The people are true and loyal, and will never concede any movement that sympathizes with Jefferson Davis, or his vile schemes for a Southern Confederacy.

LOCAL. The Boston Daily Advertiser has the following:

"New Drainage Project." We understand that the new plan of drainage, the consideration of the expediency of which by a committee was proposed in the State Senate a week ago, contemplates the bold measure of providing for the whole great area now drained by Stony Brook, comprising parts of Dedham, Dorchester, Brookline, West Roxbury and Roxbury, as well as the southerly part of Boston, and the Back Bay lands, by a new artificial outlet of a diameter of ten feet, to be constructed from Northampton street and continued nearly in a direct line straight across Dorchester Neck to the ocean, to a bluff point below the lower harbor, whereby it is contended that Charles River and the South Bay, as well as the Lower Harbor generally, would be relieved from any possible danger of accumulation. The length of this artificial conduit would be about three miles, and its estimated cost is about $300,000, in addition to the cost of the various main drains and sewers necessary for collecting the drainage at the point of beginning. This plan is suggested as a substitute for all those heretofore considered.

The granite interests of Quincy would be likely to come into a share of the benefits of this enterprise, as a large amount of stone materials would be wanted for its completion.

"BUTTER FIFTY CENTS A POUND." What's the remedy? The New York Express answers the question by saying: Stop eating it, or eat just half as much. Many have so resolved, and mean to carry out their resolution, until the price falls, which price by the way is the result of combination and speculations as well as paper currency. Men who never earned a dollar in their lives by labor are now in the market buying up all the produce they can lay hands on with a view simply of getting rich. There may be human law for this, but it is against God's law of Charity.

BALLOON'S DOLLAR MONTHLY. This is one of our monthly issues which is deserving of more than a passing notice. Under the able management of its talented editor, the work has reached its nineteenth volume. The May number, which has made its appearance, is an unusually interesting one, and is a fair specimen of its general character. "Little Mary and her Chicken," "A Boy for a Lady," and "The Trapper's Peri," are stories of great merit, and the other reading matter, is of a high order. The object of the publishers seems to be, to combine the solid with the useful and entertaining, which, with its unprecedented cheapness, has rendered the Dollar Monthly a great favorite with the public.

ANFUL CONDITION. We learn from one of our citizens residing on Granite street, that owing to the extremely bad condition of this thoroughfare, the inhabitants residing in that section of the town are making arrangements to call on the County Commissioners to see what can be done to get them out of the mud.

The price of board at the first class hotels in Boston will be three dollars and a half per day after the 15th inst.

The Great American Conflict.

BY HORACE GREELY.

We have examined several works on the Rebellion already issued, but none of them will compare with this work, or in any way supply its place. Probably no person is better qualified for the task he has undertaken than Mr. Greely. It is a work which no intelligent American can afford to be without. We hesitate not to say it promises to be the most complete and valuable history of the GREAT AMERICAN CONFLICT.

This work will be published in two volumes; and we understand can only be obtained of Agents: one of which will canvass this and neighboring towns.

St. Patrick's Sunday School Society.

At a meeting of the St. Patrick's Sunday School Society, of Quincy, held April 3d, the following Preamble and Resolutions were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS: We have heard with feelings of the deepest regret, of the death of our late fellow-member and townsman, Patrick Connorton, who has been so long identified with every effort which has been made in this town to elevate or improve the condition of the Irish people resident here, therefore

Resolved: That the Members of this Society express their sincere sorrow for the death of Patrick Connorton, and from their long acquaintance with him, and their knowledge of his many sterling qualities as a Catholic and an Irishman, they thoroughly appreciate the loss which his family and friends have sustained in his decease.

Resolved: That we tender to his bereaved Widow and Orphans our deepest sympathy in their distress at the loss of so good a husband and father.

Resolved: That a copy of these Resolutions be sent to his Widow and Orphans, and be inserted in the Boston Pilot, and in the Quincy Patriot.

TIMOTHY DEASY, President.
GEORGE CAHILL, Secretary.

JUSTICE COURT. Before Justice Adams on Tuesday last, Hannah O'Flaherty was arraigned for stealing the sum of ten dollars from a trunk in the house of Martin Kiggey, at Spantum. The only evidence against Hannah, was that she called at the house and spent the afternoon of the day before the money was missed, consequently she was discharged, much to the chagrin of Kiggey.

Catherine Mahoney, just returned from a 30 days' confinement in the House of Correction was brought in by Officer French, of "Police Station No. 1." Catherine having been complained of as a common drunkard, was tried and found guilty, sentenced to four months in House of Correction.

HOSIERY AND GLOVES. Ladies of Quincy, Dorchester, Milton, Weymouth and Braintree, we would call your particular attention to the advertisement of Cushman & Brooks to be found in another column. Do not fail to visit their new store when you go to the city. A large and splendid stock you will find at reasonable rates.

PAINTERS. Are very subject to various skin diseases, in consequence of being compelled to handle many poisonous pigments made from lead, copper, mercury, and the like. They are subject to a peculiar affection, called "Wrist-drop," when working much with white lead. This is partial paralysis, which, if not attended to, becomes permanent. Dress the poisoned sores with GUAC'S SALVE, and they will soon be cleared and healed; and, in Wrist-drop, rub the Salve well in three or four times a day. It will never fail to eradicate the disease.

TOWN MEETING. We would call the attention of Voters of Quincy, to the Town Meeting Warrant, to be found on our next page.

ENGINEERS OF FIRE DEPARTMENT. At a meeting of the Selectmen held April 9th, Joseph G. Brackett, John Chamberlin, Samuel Ames, William H. Sampson, and James M. Glover, were appointed Engineers of the Fire Department for the year ensuing.

ACCIDENT. We learn from the Boston Journal, that a young man named Thayer, son of the hotel keeper of that name at Milton Lower Mills, while engaged in shooting geese at Spantum, on Wednesday, a pistol which he carried in his pocket exploded as he was pursuing a flock of geese, and the ball entered his arm just above the elbow and passed up into his shoulder, inflicting a severe wound.

PUBLIC DOCUMENTS. We have received valuable Congressional Documents, from Hon. Charles Sumner, for which he will accept our thanks.

A CHANGE. We understand that the "Central Boot and Shoe Store," formerly under the charge of Mr. Geo. H. Cummings, has been taken by Mr. Charles H. Curtis, under whose management those in want of boots and shoes of the different qualities and latest styles, will be sure to have their wants supplied.

REV. STARR KING. We have received from the publisher, J. W. Black, 173 Washington street, Boston, a photograph of this eminent divine. Those who have seen it, pronounce it a most excellent likeness. A valuable memento for possession by the friends of those who cherish the memory of this distinguished scholar and divine.

JURORS. The following persons have been drawn to serve as Jurors from this town: Nathan H. White, Grand Juror.
Peter R. Page, and Lemuel Billings, Petit Jurors.
Superior Court, April term, Norfolk Co.

PERSONAL. The many friends of Colonel George H. French, of the Briggs House, Chicago, will be pleased to learn that his health is rapidly improving during his temporary residence in Memphis, Tennessee, where he is at present stopping by advice of his physician.

MOURNING GOODS. We would call the attention of those visiting the city for mourning goods to the advertisement of Messrs. Williams & Co., to be found in our columns to-day.

A CARD. To the many friends outside the Spiritual ranks who so generously volunteered their services in the Entertainment recently given at the Town Hall, the Spiritualists of Quincy with grateful tender their thanks.
Per order,
SPIRITUAL ASSOCIATION.

Poetry.

The Girls and the Wives.

Somebody has written the following about the girls and set it about:—
 God bless the girls
 Whose golden curls
 Blend with our evening dreams;
 They haunt our lives
 Like spirit wives,
 Or—as oases haunt the streams.
 They soothe our pains,
 They fill our brains
 With dreams of summer hours;
 God bless the girls,
 God bless the curls,
 God bless our human flowers!

The wives, we think, are quite as deserving of a blessing as the girls; therefore we submit the following:—

God bless our wives,
 They fill our lives
 With little bees and honey;
 They ease life's shocks,
 They mend our socks,
 But—don't they spend the money!
 When we are sick,
 They heal us quick—
 That is, if they love us;
 If not, we die,
 And yet they cry,
 And place tombstones above us!

The Bluebird.

No cloud spots dim thy radiant wing,
 Dye'd in the azure of the sky;
 No storm grates in thy melody,
 Blithe minstrel of the joyful spring.
 The flowers wake from their lethargy,
 And listen to thy simple strains;
 The brooklet breaks its icy chains,
 And joins the cheerful jubilee.
 Behold the trees on vale and hill,
 Stretch out their arms so stout and true,
 To hold thy nest and eggs of blue,
 And yield their berries to thy bill.
 Fair violets, like drops of bloom,
 Rained from the over-arching skies,
 Look up to thee with soft, sweet eyes,
 And breathe a prayer of sweet perfume.
 O blithe song—blossom on the tree,
 Precursor of a happy year—
 The flower, red, white and blue, are here,
 Emblems of love and liberty.

Faint Not.

Who weary plods along the plain,
 Or breathless climbs the mountain side,
 Longs for a sheltered resting place
 Sull to his fainting soul denied.
 So he who walks life's dreary moors,
 Or climbs its weary mount of woe,
 Yields for a blissful home of rest,
 Which yet his way-worn soul may know.
 The traveller on the desert plain,
 Hopeless and faint, lies down to die;
 When night gives way to morning's beam,
 Behold! the glistening well-spring nigh.
 The climber on the Alpine height,
 Besumber'd, would sink in dreamless sleep;
 One turn!—before his dazzled sight
 The convent lights their watches keep.
 Hope on! thou way-worn child of earth!
 Brave heart! hold on!—at every beat,
 Thou near'st where heavenly waters flow,
 Which yet thy bliss-filled soul shall greet!
 Climb bravely up the rugged way,
 Faint not upon the darkness height;
 Each step, though tread in pain, will bring Thee nearer to the heavenly light!

Anecdotes.

An illiterate person who always volunteered to go round with the hat, but was suspected of carrying his own pocket, overheard once a hint to that effect, replied:
 Other gentlemen puts down what they think proper, and so do I. Charity's a private concern, and what I give is nothing to nobody.
 Mamma, said a young lady the other day, what is emigration?
 Emigrating, dear, is a young girl going to Australia.
 What is colonizing, mamma?
 Colonizing, dear, is marrying there and having a family.
 Well, mamma, I should like to go to Australia.
 A little boy, while writhing under the tortures of an ague, was told to rise up and take a powder his mother had prepared for him.
 Powder! powder! said he, raising himself on one elbow, and putting on a smile; mother I ain't a gun.
 A passenger, having hired a boat to take him across a rather rough stream, asked the Irish boatman if anybody was ever lost there.
 Nivir, replied Pat; me brother was drown'd here last week, but we found him again the next day.
 An Irishman took the cars at Boston for Worcester. On jumping from the cars, he remarked that, if he had known he could have made the journey in so short a time, he would have walked a-foot.

DENTISTRY.

THE undersigned have associated themselves together in the practice of Dental Surgery, at the old office of Dr. S. Stocking, No. 19 Tremont Street, Boston. We are prepared to do the best of work in every department of our profession, and on the most REASONABLE TERMS. We shall give special attention to Filling Decayed Teeth in the most thorough and approved manner. In addition to setting teeth in gold and silver, we shall bestow especial pains in mounting whole and half sets on Vulcanized Rubber base—a mode of adapting artificial teeth to the mouth, so universally popular, as to have almost entirely superseded the use of gold and other precious metals for that purpose. The Rubber base being less expensive than gold and silver, brings the price down to the reach of persons of limited means. We entreat ourselves that an experience of twenty-five years will secure to our patrons peculiar advantages, as well in the quality of our work as in the terms we offer them. The use of Ether will be continued in our practice, and administered in the most judicious and scientific manner.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, April 23d, 1864.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

Town Meeting.

At a legal meeting of the voters of Quincy, held on Wednesday last, the following business was transacted:

Eldwin W. Marsh was elected Moderator.

Voted, That the sum of twelve hundred dollars be raised by taxation for reimbursing the source from which it was procured, the amount that has already been expended, and also for what further expenses may be incurred for recruiting purposes under the call of the President of the United States for men, dated October 17, 1863—February 1, and March 14, 1864.

Voted, That the Selectmen be authorized to offer $125 each for all recruits that may be recruited from this town, under each and every call that may be made by the President of the United States, from this day to March 1, 1865.

Voted, That the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department be authorized to purchase three hundred feet of Hose for Niagara Engine, No 1, if deemed necessary.

Voted, To accept the Trust Officers, as appointed by the Selectmen, electing William Curtis, in place of John Chamberlin who does not accept.

Voted, That the Selectmen and School Committee, be a Committee to revise the School Districts, with instructions to report at the next March meeting, and that they cause an article to be inserted in the warrant for that meeting for the consideration of their report.

Voted, That this meeting be dissolved.

Soldier's Record.

Among the commissions issued from the Adjutant General's Office the past week, was one to our townsman, John A. Pratt, who was commissioned a First Lieutenant in the 16th Regiment.

John Dag, of Company D, 20th Mass. Regiment, arrived home a few days since on a thirty days' furlough, having re-enlisted in the Quincy quota.

Charles L. Nightingale, of this town, returned home a few days since on a thirty days' furlough, having re-enlisted. He has seen hard service, having been with the 29th Regiment in all their marches and battles in Virginia and Tennessee.

M. M. C. Chubbuck, Peter Farrell, and Jas. Smith, of the 6th Mass. Battery, and Thomas Magee, Company M, of 1st Heavy Artillery, formerly the 14th Mass. Regiment, arrived home on Thursday last, on a thirty days' furlough, they having re-enlisted on the Quincy quota. We learn from Mr. Magee, that John W. Moore, and Joseph W. Hayden, of Company M, have also re-enlisted on the Quincy quota, and are daily expected home. Too much praise cannot be awarded these heroes for their self-denial in re-enlisting from their own towns, while their comrades are enlisting to fill the quotas of other towns, and receiving the sum of one hundred and twenty five dollars therefor; it seems to us that it would be but an act of justice to these men if some of our liberal hearted citizens would call a town meeting, and vote them the bounty they deserve.

We were in error two weeks since in giving the name of James Kelly when he re-enlisted on the Quincy quota; he re-enlisted from Weymouth.

THE LAST ONE OF THE SEASON. Another Grand Entertainment, is to be given in aid of the Ladies' Soldiers' Aid Association, on Monday evening, May 24, at the Town Hall, consisting of Parlor Theatricals, Tableaux and music. This being the last one of the season is expected to be the most entertaining and attractive, and the public are generally invited. Particulars given next week in the Patriot, and also by posted notices.

PERSONAL. We are sorry to learn, that our genial friend, the Depot Master of the Old Colony Railroad, Mr. Henry A. Gay, has been switched off from duty, by a severe cold, which has confined him to the house for a number of days. He is improving, however, and it is hoped that he will soon be in running order again.

NEW FIRM. It will give pleasure to many of our citizens to learn that there is a prospect of getting the usual Spring and Summer repairing done promptly and faithfully, by trusty young men, well known to our citizens generally. We would call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Messrs Spear & Davenport in another column.

CHARLESTON AS IT IS. A Union man in Charleston writes to a friend in Philadelphia, under date of Feb. 22, that the lower part of the town, comprising the most valuable of the public buildings, stores, and private houses, is given over to Gilmore's shells. The prices of living are enormous. Hotels charge from $12 to $20 per day; beef is $3 a pound, brown sugar is $4 50; wood is $56 a cord. Deserters throng the woods and swamps all over the country; the rebels hunt them as they do negroes, with dogs.

Boston Correspondence.

BOSTON, APRIL 21, 1864.

THE WAR—CURRENCY—EVENING NEWS.

The late reverses in Florida, at Fort Pillow, and in Louisiana, seem to be unfavorable signs for the "Spring Campaign." These disasters may be the result of accomplishing too much work, or at least attempting to do so, in a premature manner. Matters have reached such a pitch, that it will require all the military skill and all the financial ability of the country to put the rebellion down. Shady as some appearances, there is no reason for despondency. Our cause is just and we shall surely succeed. As we have always maintained, the fearful struggle before us, is between freedom and despotism. May the Union be restored, and consolidated on the enduring basis of universal justice, liberty and equality.

Financial matters continue shaky, all attributed to the inflation of the currency, brought on as it is asserted, by Congress, and the State Banks. For this issue, there is no remedy, as Congress maintaining but the exercise of its legitimate power over the currency to be as exclusive over paper money as over coin. Mr. Hooper objects to the permanent supplying of paper money by the Government, because of the hostility of State banks and the practical difficulty of Government redemption in coin when specie payments are renewed; and the further difficulty of the irregular absorption of the currency which could not be obtained unless Government adding banking to its other functions. It is evident that State banks will have to wind up or avail themselves of the National Banking Law. In the meantime, Government stocks are stronger—gold is declining, and many Railroad shares dropping. Business improves as the spring opens, and the range of speculation is as wide as ever. The Boston Herald of yesterday, says, that Tuesday was one of the "brightest days for money that has been known for a long time. The little panic indicated what would occur if circumstances should transpire to force payments. Stocks would fall with a thump, and hundreds would be forced to suspend payment who consider themselves worth fortunes.

Evening. There is much news: That Lee's forces on the Rapidan are sixty thousand strong, with indications of a forward movement. That Plymouth, North Carolina, has been attacked; Union gun-boats reported sunk, and Newbern threatened by the rebels. That the battle of the 8th instant was a serious defeat to the Federals; but the battle of the 9th, on the Red River, Louisiana, was a great victory to them; two thousand prisoners and thirty-six guns captured. The news of General Banks' army meeting with a defeat is not confirmed. The whole affair a skirmish and the rebels compelled to retreat.

The Ice Chest—A new idea.

The ever-teeming mind of Yankee ingenuity, is always ample in its resources to meet the wants and necessities of humanity. The world in which we live is marked with change and decay. Death's visitations are often unexpected, and made under circumstances, that many a relative and friend have been hurried to the long home, with scarcely a glimpse of remembrance observed, and while, perhaps a dutiful husband or parent are absent, a parting look at the dear object of their affections. But thanks to the inventive genius of the age, the Ice Chest, a modern invention, obviates many of these difficulties, and does away with the necessity of precipitate haste on such occasions. Simple in its construction, still, it is admirably adapted to the purposes for which it is designed. At first view, it has the appearance of a double coffin; one resting on the top of the other; but on a closer examination, it is found to consist of parts. The first part, or that which rests on the floor, is intended to hold the remains; in its side, is inserted a window, through which the body may be viewed at any time. The second, is an exact counter-part of the first, and is so nicely fitted, as to render the whole perfectly air-tight; it can be taken off, however, and removed, when occasion requires; a free circulation is kept up between the two, by means of an air-valve. The upper chamber is the receptacle for the ice, and the quantity is so regulated, as to reduce the temperature within—not to freezing point, but sufficient to arrest decomposition. In this way, the remains of our friends may be preserved for any length of time, even in the hottest weather, without inconvenience or danger.

The benefits likely to result from this improvement, has claimed the attention of Mr. Charles H. Kimball, who has a number in a state of forwardness, suited to persons of all ages, which, those in want will have the privilege of using, with all necessary assistance and information rendered, for a liberal compensation. He invites an inspection of them at his rooms, 55 Hancock street.

SENSIBLE. The Old South Parish, Reading, during the Revolutionary war voted that their minister's salary should "rise or fall as the money shall grow better or worse." They have recently added two hundred dollars more to their pastor's salary, inasmuch as money is decidedly worse just now.

ATTENTION OF FARMERS. We would call the attention of those in want of garden or field seeds, agricultural implements &c., to the advertisement of Whittemore, Belcher & Co. in our columns to-day. A good assortment of articles for the farm can be found at their store, and the farmers of Quincy and vicinity are invited to call and examine.

DECORATIVE ART. We have seen recent specimens of fancy printing which we remember ever to have seen. All who desire work in his line will do well to read his card among our new advertisements. He aims to be at the head of his profession.

Justices' Court.

Before Justice Adams, on Thursday last, John Morrissey was arraigned on complaint of George Eaton Esq., President of the Quincy Horse Railroad Corporation on two indictments: the first, for an assault on Isaiah White, the well-known and popular conductor. The second for uttering profane and indecent language toward said White. From the testimony given in the case, it appears that Morrissey being a passenger on the car, conducted by Mr. White, on Sunday April 3d, commenced smoking in the car, when White informed him that it was against the rules of the Corporation, whereupon Morrissey commenced abusing him by words and other rough usage; found guilty, fined ten dollars and costs on the first indictment, three dollars and costs on the second, amounting in all to $23 90. This sentence should be a warning to all others who feel disposed to create a disturbance in the Horse cars.

Jane Rachford was complained of for an assault on Margaret Baker; found guilty, and fined three dollars and costs, amounting to $7 75. Pugnaciously disposed females beware!

On Wednesday, John Wren, more commonly known as Jacko, plead guilty to the charge of being a common drunkard; sentenced to sixty days in House of Correction.

MARINE DISASTER. Schooner America, Capt. Elwell, of this town, from Philadelphia for Providence, with coal, went ashore on Falkland Island Reef, on the 16th inst.,—she got off by throwing overboard some thirty tons of coal and arrived at New London on the 17th, leaking slightly.

APPOINTMENT. We are pleased to learn that the Chairman of our Selectmen, Colonel Ebenezer Adams, has been appointed by his Excellency, the Governor, a Justice of the Peace for the County of Norfolk.

SUBSCRIBE FOR A PAPER. It certainly is a good time not only to pay old debts, but to subscribe for a paper, for bank bills are still taken at par, though really worth now but fifty-eight cents on the dollar.

AUCTION. Our readers will bear in mind, that the auction sale of furniture of N. D. Allen, will be this afternoon at Joseph Arey's store; also after the sale, a stock of groceries belonging to Mr. Arey. See advertisement.

NEW CURRENCY. The new two cent piece looks like gold; a wreath of wheat, surrounding "2 cents," and around which are the words "United States of America," form one side. The shield of Liberty, and the words, "God our Trust," make up the converse side.

A RISK. A Richmond correspondent of the Atlanta (Georgia) Appeal says that a resident of Richmond advertises his furniture for sale because his rent was raised from six hundred dollars to five thousand dollars.

A FOREIGN LOAN. The New York Times intimates that should the further curtailment of the greenback currency and the continued high rates of gold and exchange seem to demand it, Government will negotiate a loan of $50,000,000 in Europe.

NOTICE. Wednesday the 27th inst., the beautiful residence of Mr. John Parker, on Quincy Avenue, in this town, is to be sold at auction. See advertisement.

Poetry.

Leap Year has Come.

A WORD TO THE LADIES.

Leap year has come, now ladies take it
And try and see how you can make it
At courtship—sooth, I have been trying Talking of Cupid's darts, and sighing;
This two years—and they've given back Naught but the mitter, alas such.
There does not heave a single breast,
In sympathy with my unrest;
I do not hear love's whispered tone
In gentle answer to my own.
I see whole scores of tempting lips
Red as a pair of Baywood Chips.
And those, who have had leave to kiss,
Speak of it, as being heavenly bliss;
And though I've even sought to try it,
The jades to me, would e'er deny it.
And this has been just returning,
For all my trying, sighing, yearning,
That they have given, I've thought of ropes,
But Leap Year, filled my heart with hopes;
Hopes that some maiden, chaste and fair
Would come and seek me just to share
With her, life's sorrow, joy and care.
Lord knows how quickly I would do it,
I would say yes, nor fear to rue it.
But hope's a rogue; and much I fear me
There'll not a single lass come near me.
And spite of this well meant suggestion,
I fear no one will put the question.
But Ladies, I would say if you'll Just call, I'll make the golden rule;
The standard of my every action
And try and live it to a fraction;
Another rule I'd have observed
'Tis this (be quick) first come, first served.

The Spirit World.

Last night, when all the household slept,
The north wind blew so wild,
That I lay in bed and wept,
Bitterly, like a child.
I know 'twas weak and coward like;
Once I was bold and brave,
Ready to march, ready to strike,
Now I yearn for the grave;
Yearn to the souls of those above,
Who in God's light are laid—
To feel the bliss of re-awakened love,
And live in spirit-world.
I walk alone, where fresh winds blow,
Over the rocky shore,
And feel God's world in beauty grow
Ever and evermore;
I stand away, and sit apart,
While all the world is gay;
In solitariness of heart
I go alone to pray;
And in the silent, summer night,
When dim, blue mists are curled,
I watch the dying amber light,
And live in spirit-world.
When through the aisle and cloister dim
The ghostly twilight falls,
And sunset shadows fit and skim
Over the sculptured walls,
Alone, I touch the organ-chords,
And bid the music roll,
And seem to hear an angel's words
Of greeting to my soul.
The music lingers round the bells,
Then seems to heaven whirled,
And bears me upward with the swells
To realms of spirit-world.
Weak, oh! weak is my woman's will,
And gone from my control;
In vain I bid the tenet still,
Or pause be in my soul;
For never more is rest in life,
Or home on earth for me.
But evermore is endless strife,
And struggles to be free.
For life is short and lone, and one by one
My joys their souls have furled,
And those who with me voyaged have gone
To dwell in spirit-world.

Anecdotes.

Said an Irishman to a telegraph operator,
do you ever charge anybody for the address in a message?
No, replied the operator.
And do you charge for signing his name,
sir? said the customer.
No, sir.
Well, then, will ye please send this? I just want my brother to know I am here, handing the following: To John M. Finn—at New York—(signed)—Patrick M. Finn.
It was sent as a tribute to Patrick's shrewdness.
Some people are never happy but in the hearing or telling the news. A person being to a public house one day, asked a stranger who came in, what's the news?
Says the stranger, why, forty thousand men have razen to-day.
The newsman, supposing the stranger referred to a rebellion, asked him, what do they intend to do?
Why, go to bed again, at night, said the stranger.
Grandma, said an intelligent but crafty child, do you want some candy.
Yes, dear, I should like some.
Then go to the store and buy me some, and I will give you a part.
Why don't you get married? said a young lady, the other day, to a bachelor friend.
I have been trying for the last ten years to find some one who would be silly enough to have me, was the reply.
I guess you haven't been up our way, was the instigating rejoinder.

THE undersigned have associated themselves
together in the practice of Dental Surgery,
at the old office of Dr. S. Stocking, No. 19 Tremont Row, Boston. We are prepared to do the best of work in every department of our profes-

will give special attention to filling Decayed Teeth in the most thorough and approved manner. In addition to setting teeth on gold and silver, we shall bestow especial pains in mount-base—a mode of adapting artificial teeth to the mouth, so universally popular, as to have almost entirely superseded the use of gold and other precious metals for that purpose. The Rubber base being less expensive than gold and silver, brings

the price down to the reach of persons of limited means. We flatter ourselves that an experience
of twenty-five years will secure to our patrons
peculiar advantages, in the quality of our work, and in the terms we offer them. The use of Ether will be continued in our practice, and ad-

The Snow-Fall.
The trees are hung with garlands white
That were last night so bare;
You'd think the blooms of myriad springs
Had fallen everywhere.
The orchard shines with crystal fruit,
Like showers of fairy land;
O'er everything all in the night,
Was laid a magic wand.
Each rude old hedge to marble turned,
In massive columns built,
And every little cot's adorned
With silver bands of gilt.
Even o'er the church-yard beds is lain,
Spread of the buried wool
A coverlet as rich as grass,
Spring weaves of daisies fall.
And over all the earth is spread,
Hill, lane, and dusty street,
A carpet dainty e'en enough
For dance of fairy feet;
A carpet wove of tiny stars,
All sparkling in the light,
Dust from the pearly floors of heaven,
The angels swept at night.

Scrap.
The heart sickens when it sees how many and how powerful are the causes in operation to pervert, crush, and waste man's intellect, and to keep those powers groveling in the dust, which should be soaring among the stars.
Old Sir James Herring was remonstrated with for not rising earlier. "I can make up my mind to it," said he, "but I cannot make up my body."
A vagrant stopped at a house on Sunday, and begged for some cider. The lady refused to give him any, and he reminded her of the oft quoted remark, "that she might entertain angels unwares." "Yes," said she,
"angels don't go about drinking cider on Sundays."
Dress has a moral effect upon the conduct of mankind. Let any gentleman find himself with dirty boots, old surtout, soiled neckcloth and a general negligence of dress, he will find a corresponding disposition to negligence of address.
Hatred and vengeance are very different sentiments; one is that of little minds, the other the effect of a law to which great souls are obedient. God avenges and does not hate. Hatred is the vice of narrow souls, they feed it with all their littleness, and make it the pretext of base tyrannies.
He that rings only one bell, will hear only one sound; and he that lives only with one class, will see but one scene of the great drama of life.
Injuries accompanied by insults are never forgotten; all men, on these occasions are good haters, and lay out their revenge at compound interest.
Write your name by kindness, love and mercy, on the hearts of the people you come in contact with year by year, and you will never be forgotten.
In all governments there must, of necessity be both the law and the sword. Laws without arms would give us not liberty, but licen-tiousness; and arms without laws would produce not subjection but slavery.
A lawyer, in cross-examining a witness, asked him, among other questions, where he was on a particular day, to which he replied:
"In company with two friends. Friends!" exclaimed the lawyer, two thieves, I suppose you mean. They may be so, replied the witness, for they were both lawyers.

Miscellaneous.
Our Old Grandmother.
A BEAUTIFUL SKETCH.
I find the marks of my shortest steps beside those of my beloved mother, which were measured by my own, says Alexander Dumas, and so conjures up one of the sweetest images in the world. Revisiting the home of his infancy—he was retracing the little paths around it, in which he had once walked; and strange flowers could not efface, and rank grass could not conceal, and cruel ploughs could not obliterate his "shortest footsteps," and his mother's beside him, measured by his own.
And who needs to be told whose footsteps
they were that thus keep time with the feeble pattering of childhood's little feet? It was no mother behind whom Aesculus walked "with unequal steps," in Virgil's line, but a strong, stern man, who could have borne him, and not been burdened; folded in his arms from all danger, and not been weary; every thing, indeed, he could have done for him, but just what he needed most;
he could not sympathize with him—he could not be a child again. Ah, a rare art is that;
for, it is an art—to set back the great clock of time, and be a boy again. Man's imagination can easily see the child a man;
but how hard it is for it to see the man a child; and he who has learned to glide back into that rosy time when he did not know that thorns were under the roses, or that clouds would ever return after the rain; when he thought a tear could stain a cheek no more than a drop of rain a flower; when he fancied that life had no disguise, and hope no blight at all—has come as near as anybody can to discovering the northwest passage to Paradise.
And it is, perhaps, for this reason, that it is so much easier for a mother to enter the kingdom than it is for the rest of the world.
She fancies she is leading the children, when after all, the children are leading her, and they keep her indeed where the river is the narrowest and the air is the clearest; and the beckoning of the radiant hand is so plainly seen from the other side, that it is no wonder she often lets go her grasp upon the little finger she is holding, and goes over to the neighbors; and the children follow like lambs to the fold, for we think it ought to be written: "Where the mother is, there will the children be also."
But it was not of the mother we began to think, but of the dear, old-fashioned grandmother, whose thread of love, "by hand," on life's little wheel, was longer and stronger than they make now; was wound around and about the children she saw playing in the children's arms, in a true knot, that nothing but the shears of Atropos could sever;
for do we not recognize the lambs sometimes when summer days are over, and autumn winds are blowing, as they come bleating from the yellow fields, by the crimson thread we wound around their necks in April or May, and so undo the gate and let the wanderer in.
Blessed be the children who have an old fashioned grandmother. As they hope for length of days, let them love and honor her, for we can tell them they can never find another.
There is a large old kitchen somewhere in the past, and an old fashioned fire-place there, with its smooth jambs of stone—with its many knives that have been sharpened there;
smooth with many little fingers, that ring clung there. There are andirons, with rings in the tops, wherein many temples of flame have been builded, with spires and turrets of crimson. There is a broad worn hearth, by feet that have been torn and bleeding by the way, or been made beautiful, and walked upon floors of tresselated gold. There are tongs in the corner, wherewith we grasped a coal, "blowing for a little life," lighted our first candle. There is a shovel wherewith were drawn forth the glowing embers, in which we saw our first fancies and dreamed our first dreams; the shovel with which we stirred the logs till the sparks rushed up the chimney as if a forge were in blast below, and wished we had so many lambs, so many carbles, and so many somethings that we coveted; and so it was as we wished our first wishes.
There is a chair—a low, rush-bottom chair
there is a little wheel in the corner, a big wheel in the garret, a loom in the chamber.
There are chests full of linen and yarn, and quilts of rare pattern, and samples in frame.
And every thing, and always the dear old wrinkled face of her whose firm elastic step mimics the feeble saunter of her children's children—the old-fashioned grandmother of twenty years ago. She, the very Providence of the old homestead. She who loved us all,
and said she wished there were more of us to love, and took all the school in the Hollow for grandchildren besides. A great expansive heart was hers, beneath the woolen gown, or that more stately bombazine, or that sole heir-loom of silken texture.

We can see her to-day, those mild blue eyes, with more of beauty in them than time could touch, or death do more than hide—those eyes that hold both smiles and tears within the fairest call of every one of us, and soft reproof, that seemed not passion but regret. A white tress has escaped from beneath her snowy cap; she has just restored a wandering lamb to its mother; she lengthened the tether of a vine that was straying over the window, and came in, and plucked a four-leaved clover for Ellen. She sits down by the little wheel—a tress is running through her fingers from the distaff's dishevelled head, when a small voice cries, "Grandma," Tommy from the old red cradle; and "Grandma," Tommy shouts, from the top of the stairs. Gently she lets go the thread, for her patience is almost as beautiful as her charity, and she touches the little red bark in a moment, till the young voyager is in a dream again, and then directs Tommy's unavailing attempts to harness the cat. The tick of the clock runs faint and low, and she opens the mysterious door and proceeds to wind it up. We are all on tip-toe, and we beg in a breath to be lifted upon by one, and look in the hundredth time upon the tin cases of weights, and the poor lonely pendulum, which goes to and fro by its little dim window, and never comes out in the world—and our petitions are all granted, and we are lifted up, and we all touched with a finger the wonderful weights, and the music of the little wheel is resumed.
Was Mary to be married, or John to be wedded in a shroud? So meekly did she fold the white hands of the one upon the still bosom, that there seemed to be a prayer in them; and so sweetly did she breathe the white rose in the hair of the other, that one would have wondered had more roses budded for company.
How she stood between us and apprehension; how the rudest of us softened beneath the gentle pressure of her faded and tremulous hand! From her capacious pocket that had been ever withdrawn closed, only to be opened in our own with nuts she had gathered, the cherries she had plucked, the eggs she had found, the "turnover" she had baked, the trinkets she had purchased for us, as the product of her spinning, the blessing she had stored for us—the offering of her heart.
What treasure of story fell from those old lips; of good fairies and evil, of the old times when she was a girl; and we wondered if ever—she couldn't be handsome or deaser—but if she was "little." And then, when we began to sing! "Sing one of the old songs you used to sing to mother, Grandma."
"Children, I can't sing?" she always said;
and mother used to lay her knitting softly
down, and the kitten stopped playing with
the yarn on the floor, and the clock ticked
lower in the corner, and the fire died down to a glow, like an old heart that is neither chilled nor dead, and grandmother sang. To be sure it wouldn't do for the parlor and the concert room now-a-days; but then, it was the old kitchen, and the old fashioned grandmother, and the old ballad, in the dear old times, and we can hardly see to write for the memory of them, though it is a hand's breadth to sunset.
Well, she sang. Her voice was feeble and wavering, like a fountain just ready to fail;
but she was "little." And then, when we began to sing! "Sing one of the old
songs you used to sing to mother, Grandma."
"Children, I can't sing?" she always said;
and mother used to lay her knitting softly
down, and the kitten stopped playing with
the yarn on the floor, and the clock ticked
lower in the corner, and the fire died down to a glow, like an old heart that is neither chilled
nor dead, and grandmother sang. To be sure it wouldn't do for the parlor and the concert room now-a-days; but then, it was

Poetry.

Scorn not the Needy

Scorn not the poor and needy,
Whatever their lot may be;
Their hearts are pure and holy
As ever thine may be;
And though dark sorrow's billows
Across their pathway roll;
Yet still they may keep sacred
Their nobleness of soul.

Scorn not the poor and needy,
Thou may'st not know the hour
When thou thyself may falter
Beneath want's mighty power;
And, therefore, if in sorrow
Thou see'st a brother man,
Place not upon his prospects
An aristocratic ban.

Scorn not a fallen brother,
Though deep in vice and sin;
But strive to light love's fires,
Which are burning dim within;
And when to paths of virtue
He shall return again,
His wife shall ever bless thee,
His children bless thy name.

Then never scorn thy brother,
Whatever his lot may be,
The God who made and formed him,
Made, formed and fashioned thee;
With him we all are tending
To realms of bliss above;
Ah, let us then while living,
Be filled with deeds of love.

Lessons of Spring

Lessons sweet of spring returning,
Welcome to the thoughtful heart!
May I call ye sense or learning,
Instinct pure, or heaven-taught art?
Be your title what it may,
Sweet the lengthening April day,
When with you the soul is free,
Ranging o'er hill and lea

Soft as Memnon's harp at morning,
To the inward ear devout,
Touched by light, with heavenly warning,
Your transporting chords ring out,
Every leaf in every nook,
Every wave in every brook,
Chanting with a solemn voice,
Minds as of a better choice.

Needs no show of mountain hoary,
Winding shore or deepening glen,
Where the landscapes in its glory
Teaches truth to wandering men;
Give true hearts but earth and sky,
And some flowers to bloom and die;
Homely scenes and simple views
Lowly thoughts may best infuse.

See the soft green willow springing
Where the waters gently pass,
Every way her free arms flinging
O'er the moist and reedy grass,
Long ere winter blasts are fled,
And her kindly flower displayed
Ere her leaf can cast a shade.

Though the rudest hand assail her,
Patiently she droops awhile,
But when showers and breezes hail her,
Wears again her willing smile,
Thus I learn Contentment's power
From the slightest willow bower,
Ready to give thanks and live
On the least that Heaven may give.

Anecdotes.

A lawyer having some legal business to transact with a widowed lady, took occasion to inquire her age. The nation, who had long since doffed the "widow's weeds," attempted to look prim, and much younger than she really was, as she replied:
Thirty-five years, sir.
Then turning to the daughter, he said:
May I be so bold, miss, as to inquire your age?
Certainly, I am a little past thirty-two; most three years younger than mother!

A good story is told of an Irishman who went to see a gorilla in a cabinet at Annerly College. Not knowing the difference between that animal and the gorilla, he remarked on seeing it, Saint Patrick! if they have got such soldiers as that off South, I ain't going to war.

A very excellent lady sought to instruct her grandchild in relation to the provident care of Heaven. Who gives you your daily bread? asked she.
Dad! replied the child; but uncle Peter puts the butter and sugar on!

Well, Sambo, what's yer up to now days? O, I is a carpenter and joiner.
He? I guess yer is. What department do you perform?
What department? Why, I does the circular work.

What's dat?
Why, I turns de grindstone.
A polite man was once making a voyage on the Danube, when the boat in which he was, sunk. When he was just on the point of drowning, he got his head above the water for a moment, and taking off his hat, said:
Ladies and gentlemen will you please excuse me! and down he went.

See here, mister, said an Irish lad of seven summers,—who was treed by a dog; if you don't take that dog away I'll eat up all your apples.

Speak no Ill.

Nay, speak no ill—a kindly word
Can never leave a sting behind,
And, oh! to breathe each tale we've heard
Is far beneath a noble mind.
Full oft a better seed is sown
By choosing thus the kinder plan;
For if but little good be known,
Still let us speak the best we can.
Give me the heart that fain would hide—
Would fain another's faults efface;
How can it please human pride
To prove humanity but base?
No! let us reach a higher mood,
A nobler estimate of man;
Be earnest in the search of good,
And speak of all the best we can.
Then speak no ill—but lenient be
To other's feelings as your own;
If you're the first to fault to see,
Be not the first to make it known;
For life is but a passing day,
No lip may tell how brief its span;
Then, oh! the little time we stay,
Let's speak of all the best we can.

Straps.

GRIDDLE CAKES. Take three cups of un-sifted rye, one of Indian meal, one of flour, two great spoonfuls of molasses, two spoonfuls of saleratus dissolved, and sufficient water to make a batter.

Forty years once seemed a long and weary pilgrimage to tread. It now seems but a step. And yet along the way are broken shrines where a thousand hopes have wasted into ashes; footsteps sacred under the drifting dust; green mounds whose grass is fresh with watering tears; shadows even we could not forget. We will garner the sunshine of those years, and with chaste step and reasonable hope, push on towards the evening where signal lights will soon be seen swinging where the waters are still and storms over.

Happiness abounds most among the lowly;
there are more blossoms in the valleys than on the hills.

Love, Justice and Fortune, are said to have no eyes; but all three make us mortals open ours pretty wide sometimes.

Affection, like spring flowers, breaks through the most frozen ground at last, and the heart which asks but for another heart to make it happy, will never seek in vain.

Pain is life's sentinel. It gives warning of dangers. It says take care—you have violated the laws of health—desist or you die!
But when the wound is mortal beyond hope, the sentinel gives no challenge. Pain is of no use then. The victim must die, and usually he suffers little. Pain, therefore, if it be a penalty, is also a mercy. It is designed only to tell of danger and make us avoid it.

Labor is of noble birth; but prayer is the daughter of heaven. Labor has a place near the throne, but prayer touches the golden scepter. Labor, Martha like, is busy with much serving; but prayer sits with Mary, at the feet of Jesus!

Always to indulge our appetites is to extinguish them. Abstain that you may enjoy.

Miscellaneous.

Kitty's New Collar.

Kitty Cutting was a nice, plump little maiden of eighteen summers. Her uncle was a miller, and pretty well to do in the world. As Kitty was likely to be an heiress, this consideration alone would have attracted lovers, if Kitty had been considerably less attractive than she really was.

It so chanced that Kitty's affections happened to centre on a young man whom her uncle, the miller, by no means approved.
This was Harry Billings, a young farmer in the neighborhood. The miller's sole ground of disapproval was, that the young man had not quite so large a share of worldly possessions as he thought his niece had a right to expect.

The consequence was that he forbade young Billings the house, and requested Kitty to give him up.

Her eyes snapped in a very decided manner, and though she said nothing, it was very evident that she meant considerable.

However, she was obliged to dissemble, and Harry thought it most prudent not to approach the house when the miller was at home. By way of compensation, Kitty was in the habit of letting him know when her uncle was absent, and on these occasions they would pass a social evening together in the great square kitchen. Kitty sat on one side intent upon her knitting, and her lover fully occupied in looking at her. He succeeded in getting away before the miller arrived, otherwise there would have been a scene.

Kitty, said her uncle one day, I have got to be away this evening, and probably shall not be back before eleven or twelve o'clock.

Kitty's eyes sparkled; I dare say my readers may guess why.

I have got to go over to town, ten miles distant to see Squire Hayden. He owes me some money. So you will have to pass the evening by yourself.

I don't think I shall feel lonely, uncle, said
Kitty, demurely, I shall be so busy.

I shall be at home as soon as possible, said the miller.

Don't hurry on my account, said Kitty, innocently.

The miller went over to his work, and Kitty hastily scratched the following note:
"DEAR HARRY: Uncle has gone away
this evening, and thinks he will not be back before eleven o'clock. I thought you might like to know."
Kitty.

Folding this up and directing it to her lover, she called a little boy who was passing.
Do you want to earn three cents? she asked.

Don't I though! was the reply of young America.

Then carry this over and give it to Mr.
Billings, and mind you don't let any one see it.

The boy nodded understandingly, and was off on his mission.

Kitty was unusually lively and cheerful through the day, and was unusually active in expecting her uncle's departure.

I'm afraid its going to snow, said the miller, looking at the clouds.

O, no, it won't, said Kitty very decidedly.
You seem quite positive, said her uncle.

At any rate, I don't think it will, said
Kitty.

One might almost think that you wish to get me off, remarked the miller—considerably nearer the truth than he imagined.

So I do, said Kitty, with lucky self-possession. You said, uncle, you expected to receive some money, and I thought if you did, you might give a little to buy me a new collar.

Kitty was seized with momentary compunction, but after all, she was not going to do anything much out of the way, and so she soon got over it.

Precisely ten minutes after the miller's cart was seen rumbling up the road, Henry Billings made his appearance.

Perhaps the reader will not be astonished at his hiving time so well, when he learns—
I beg pardon, she learns, (I always give precedence to my own sex,) that Harry had been watching around the corner for over an hour in great impatience for signs that the coast was clear.

Kitty was knitting demurely by the fire
when she heard Harry's step on the door-sill.

Good gracious, Harry, how you surprised me, said she, looking up with a merry smile.
So unexpected, you know.

I thought I'd just look in upon you, said her lover, with a merry smile. I suppose your uncle is at home!

I am very sorry to say that he will be off
all the evening. You will have to call again.

I guess I'll sit down and wait, until he comes back, said Harry, taking a seat in as immediate proximity as he dares venture upon.

I am not going to detail the conversation that took place that evening between Kitty and her lover. Though interesting to them,

I have strong doubts whether it would be equally so to my present readers. The subject general, however, was devising ways and means to propitiate the determined uncle,
and remove the obstacles to their union.

This however was rather a difficult matter,
and they could not decide upon anything which they thought would answer the purpose.

Meanwhile time was passing, and that rapidly. Ten o'clock came.

Kitty and her lover was in the midst of an interesting disquisition, when, to their inexpressible consternation, the familiar rumble of the miller's cart was heard as it entered the yard.

Good gracious! ejaculated Kitty, what could have brought uncle home so soon.

It's only ten minutes past ten, said Harry,
looking hurriedly at his watch.

Something or other has happened to hasten his return. Is it possible that he suspected anything about your being here? Oh, what will he do when he finds you?

He can't more than order me out of the house, said Harry. Don't be alarmed, Kitty,
I will take all the blame.

But you can escape. You must.

This seemed to be impossible, as just then the miller was heard knocking his feet against the scraper.

Quick! let me hide you in the closet, said
Kitty.

She flew to the closet, opened the door, pushed in the bewildered Harry, and buttoned him in.

Then, with her face a little flushed, she plunged down in the rocking chair, and was knitting very industriously when her uncle entered.

Hey, Kitty, said her uncle, I suppose you didn't expect to see me quite so soon.

No, uncle, said Kitty. Why, it isn't much more than ten.

The way of it was I happened to meet the Squire at the store, four miles this side of his house, and we transacted our business there. So you see, I gained an hour or more in that way.

I wish to goodness the Squire had stopped at home, thought Kitty.

Have you been lonely, Kitty? inquired her uncle.

No, sir, said his niece, demurely, I was busy you know.

You are getting to be quite industrious.

The miller took off his boots and sat down composedly at the fire.

Kitty was in hopes he would go to bed in order that she might give her lover a chance to escape. But this he did not appear inclined to do.

Isn't it most bed-time, uncle? said Kitty.

I don't know how it is, but I don't feel at all sleepy to-night.

Kitty inwardly groaned.

But if you are sleepy don't wait for me.

O, said Kitty, looking particularly wide awake, I feel as if I could sit up all night.

Where is the weekly paper, Kitty?

Kitty would like to have said she didn't know, for she knew if her uncle got hold of that he would quite disregard the passage of time. Unfortunately there was the paper on the table under the kitchen glass. It was the first object that met her gaze as she looked up.

I see I'm in for a siege, said Kitty to herself, but I shall stand it as long as he can.

That's comfort. But I'm afraid Harry will find it pretty dull work in the closet. What would uncle say if he should find out he was there?

Half an hour passed.

The miller, who was a slow reader, was intently upon a story which interested him. Kitty saw, with a despairing glance, that he was not quite half through it.

She was beginning to be sleepy herself, or would have been had she not had so much to keep her awake.

Kitty, said her uncle, looking up, suddenly,
you had better go to bed. It is most eleven o'clock.

Are you going to bed, uncle?

No, not just yet. I want to finish this story. It's a pretty cute one. But I shan't need any company. So don't sit up on my account.

I shouldn't go to sleep if I went to bed, uncle. Besides, I want to get so much done before I go to bed.

Well, child, just as you like. Bless me, what's that?

Kitty turned pale. There was a suppressed noise in the closet.

Harry had evidently got tired of his constrained position, and was stirring round a little.

It must be the cat, said Kitty, hurriedly.

The cat! Do you allow her to be in the closet? She ought to be driven out.

The miller rose, but Kitty hurriedly, anticipating him.

She went to the closet door, opened it a trifle, and said, "Scat!"

No, the cat is not there, she said, returning to her seat.

Quarter of an hour passed.

Again a noise of a more decided character was heard.

Harry's elbow happened to hit against a plate, and it fell with a sudden crash to the floor.

I'll see what it is, exclaimed the miller, rising.

He threw open the door, and out rushed
Harry, looking rather foolish.

Well, I never! ejaculated the miller.

Before he had time to say anything further,
Kitty said hurriedly, uncle, didn't you promise me a collar?

Yes, returned the miller, but—

Kitty pressed to the side of her lover, who passed his arm around her neck, and then said, while her eyes twinkled with mischief,
"This is the collar I want, uncle; you promised me you know?"

And I'll keep it, Kitty, exclaimed the miller, bursting into a hearty laugh, no matter what it costs.

Two months from that day Kitty Cutting changed her name. Some years have elapsed, but she has not got tired of the "COLLAR"
which her uncle gave her.

For the Patriot.

The Excitement.

Among the ministers whose face was familiar to the church-going people at the old Meeting House, forty years ago, was that of Rev. Boaz Whitney, of Hingham. He was unlike some of our modern preachers, who give a sort of an exhortation about fifteen or twenty minutes long, and call it a sermon;
but with manuscript in hand, he went to the work in a scientific manner (as it has been said) with his first, secondly, thirdly, fourthly, fifthly, sixthly, lastly, finally, to conclude. He occupied the pulpit by way of exchange one Sunday, in February, 1825.

During sermon-time, a stranger entered the Meeting House. After the sermon was finished, he arose and announced to the audience that John Quincy Adams was elected President of the United States. "I am glad of it!" exclaimed the venerable preacher.

The services were soon concluded. News of this description was expected about that time. Citizens were not wholly unprepared for it. An old swivel had been mounted on wheels, a flag staff erected, and other preparations made for patriotic demonstrations on the arrival of the expected news.

One would have thought that the town had been suddenly converted to the doctrines of Calvin, Luther, George Fox, Bishop Whately, and others; viz.—that the Sabbath was a Jewish institution, and not binding under the Christian dispensation; or that the laws of God respecting the Sabbath could be violated with impunity, because of the joyful news
just received from Washington.

Be that as it may, the old gun was run out in front of the school-house (now part of Johnson's building) the flag was hoisted, and guns fired. The frightening of children and breaking a few panes of glass were matters of minor importance on that momentous occasion. The excitement continued till late in the afternoon. Although there was no telegraphic wires at that time, direct from Quincy to Washington, we had the news about six hours before it arrived in Boston. It would have been a great joke if it had not proved true.

Extracts from the Revised Statutes.

We republish by request the following Sections in Chapters 87 and 88 of the General Statutes, relating to common nuisances and Billiard tables and Bowling alleys. Owners of buildings and keepers of saloons should read it carefully. A hint to the wise is sufficient.

SUPPRESSION OF COMMON NUISANCES.

SECTION 6. All buildings, places, or tenements, resorted to for prostitution, lewdness, or illegal gaming, or used for the illegal keeping or sale of intoxicating liquors, shall be deemed common nuisances.

SECTION 7. Whoever keeps or maintains such common nuisance shall be punished by fine not exceeding one thousand dollars, or imprisonment in the county jail not exceeding one year.

SECTION 9. Whoever knowingly lets a building or tenement owned by him, or under his control, for any purpose enumerated in section six, or knowingly permits such building or tenement, or any part thereof, while under his control, to be used for such purpose, or after due notice of any such use omits to take all reasonable measures to eject therefrom the persons occupying the same as soon as it can lawfully be done, shall be deemed guilty of aiding in the maintenance of such nuisance, and punished by fine of not less than one hundred, nor more than one thousand dollars, or imprisonment in the jail not less than thirty days, nor more than six months.

BILLIARD TABLES AND BOWLING ALLEYS.

SECT. 69. The mayor and aldermen or selectmen of any city or town may grant a license to any person to keep a billiard table or bowling alley for hire, gain or reward, upon such terms and conditions as they deem proper, to be used for amusement merely,
but not for the purpose of gaming for money or other property. Such license may be revoked at the pleasure of the authority granting it.

SECT. 70. Whoever without such license keeps or suffers to be kept in a house, building, yard, or dependency thereof, by him actually occupied or owned, a table for the purpose of playing at billiards, or a bowling alley for the purpose of playing at bowls, for hire, gain, or reward, or for hire, gain, or reward, suffers any person to resort to the same for such purpose, shall forfeit for every such offence a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.

SECT. 71. The keeper of a billiard room or table, or bowling alley, who admits a minor thereto without the written consent of his parent or guardian, or who suffers any person to play at the same after six o'clock in the afternoon on Saturday, or after ten o'clock in the afternoon of any other day, shall forfeit ten dollars for the first and twenty dollars for each subsequent offence.

SECT. 72. Any marshal or his deputy, sheriff or his deputy, constable, police officer, or watchman, may at any time enter into a billiard room, bowling alley, or other room connected therewith, for the purpose of enforcing any law of the State; and whoever obstructs or hinders the entrance of such officer shall be punished by fine of not less than five nor more than twenty dollars.

SECT. 73. The provisions of section thirty-two shall apply to the erection, occupancy, or use, of buildings for bowling alleys in any city or town.

The Idler.

Every thing within us and about us shows that it never was intended that man should be idle. Our own health and comfort and the welfare and happiness of those around us, all require that man should labor. Mind, body, soul, all alike suffer and rust out by idleness;
the idler is a source of mental and moral offence to every body around. He is a nuisance in the world and needs abatement for the public good, like any other source of pestilence.

Empty.

One of Dean Trench's sermons on the subject: What we can and cannot carry away
when we die,—commences thus appositely:
"Alexander the Great, being upon his death bed, commanded that when he was carried forth to his grave, his hands should not be wrapped, as was usual, in the cere cloths, but should be left outside the bier, so that all men might see them, and might see that they were EMPTY."

Ice for Sore Throat.

Break up a small lump of ice in a towel,
and put the pieces in a bowl. Take a position slightly inclined backward, either in a chair or on a sofa. Proceed for half an hour to feed yourself with small lumps of ice, letting them dissolve slowly in the back part of the mouth, or at the entrance of the throat.
A single such application will often break up a common sore throat, which otherwise would have a course of two or three days. In case of a bad sore throat, use the ice frequently and freely. In case of diphtheria, keep a small lump constantly in the mouth.

OUR F

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, May 7th, 1864.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

Soldiers' Record.

Our townsman, Edwin L. Joyce, William L. Borrell and Joseph W. Hayden, of the 1st Heavy Artillery, arrived home a few days since on a thirty days' furlough, they having been enlisted for three years; the first two on the Weymouth, the latter on the Quincy quota.

HONORS CONFERRED. We are pleased to find the name of our townsman, William Egan, among those of the 24th Regiment who have recently been awarded "medals of honor" for gallant and "meritorious conduct" in the Morris Island campaign last summer, under General Gilmore.

Justices' Court.

Before Justice Adams, on Tuesday last, Honora Murphy was found guilty of selling liquor on two indictments; sentenced to pay a fine of ten dollars and twenty days imprisonment in the House of Correction on each indictment. Appealed.

Peter Kelly was convicted of the same offence, and received a similar sentence. Appealed.

Several other liquor cases were continued to Wednesday next.

BURGERS AGAIN. The saloon of our townsman, George Anderson, was entered on Monday night last, and robbed of a revolver, a few razors, clothes, &c. The same night an unsuccessful attempt was made to enter the jewelry store of Mr. J. O. Holden, and the grocery store of Mr. C. W. Perry.

PROSPERITY. The Quincy Horse Railroad is meeting this Spring with more than usual success. The cars each trip go well loaded with human freight. This is, as it should be. We believe there is no railroad in the State which has a better President, more liberal managers, and so courteous conductors, as the Quincy Road; all of whom try to please and accommodate the public. A new turn-out is being made in the centre of this town, nearly opposite the post office; and we learn that the cars are soon to run every half hour.

CONTRIBUTIONS FOR THE SUFFERERS OF EAST TENNESSEE. Among the numerous contributions which have flowed in to this charitable fund, the liberal sum of two hundred sixty-two dollars and ten cents, is acknowledged by the Hon. Edward Everett, President of the Board, through the columns of the Boston Daily Advertiser, from the "Unitarian Sunday School," of this town—L. P. Forbush, Superintendent.

ACCIDENT. As Dr. Gilbert and lady of this place were about to enjoy a pleasant ride on Tuesday last, they met with a narrow escape of their lives. They had hardly seated themselves in the buggy at their door, when the horse started, and before the Doctor could gain full control of the reins one of the wheels struck the gate post, throwing the occupants to the ground, and turning the buggy upon its side. We are happy to say that no bones were broken and but few slight bruises left to remind them of the event. The carriage was but little broken.

AUCTION. A large sale of livery stable stock will take place at the Hancock House Stable on Thursday next. This stock comprises horses, carriages, harnesses, etc., belonging to W. M. French, Esq., who is about to make a change in business. For full particulars see notice in another column.

ORGANIZED. The Fire Department of this town, has been organized by the choice of Joseph G. Brackett, as Chief Engineer and William Parker, Jr., as Clerk.

TRANSFERRED. Walter P. Brackett, Geo. Hersey and Luther Parrott of this town have been transferred from Co. D, 39th Regiment to the Navy.

BARGAINS. We would call the attention of our readers, to the sale of Furniture, Clothing, etc., at Auction, this afternoon and evening, at Mr. Joseph Aray, Jr.'s store. There is a lot of Men's and Boys' Clothing and a large variety of other articles. See notice in another column.

CAR TIME. It will be observed by referring to notice on next page, that there was a change in the time of running the trains on the Old Colony & Newport Railroad, last Wednesday. More trains and still better accommodations are offered.

TERM OF SERVICE. An order has been issued by Gen. Meade announcing that the three years term of service of regiments dates from the time of their being mustered into service. No regard is had to any service prior to the muster-in. Some of the soldiers are inclined to murmur at this rule, but he hints that they will be shot if they do not accede to it.

Value of the Rebellion Record.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

My attention was called a few days since to a handbill issued by Messrs. J. H. Upham and J. J. May, Recruiting Committee of the town of Dorchester, wherein they offer the sum of five dollars to any person who will furnish them the first authentic information relating to any resident of Dorchester who has entered the naval service during the present rebellion, the object being to have the same credited on their quota. Should they obtain any number of names at that price, they will probably consider the information as cheap, as each name so obtained and credited on their quota will save three hundred dollars to some unfortunate individual who would otherwise have been drafted.

On the 29th of April, 1863, a law was passed by the Legislature of this State requiring the clerks of the several cities and towns to prepare an authentic list of all persons who have entered the army and naval service of the United States from their respective municipalities. Had the clerk of Dorchester as faithfully performed his duty as the clerk of Quincy, the Recruiting Committee of Dorchester would not at this late day be put to this extra expense, and the town would in all probability have a large number of men now in the naval service, credited to their present quotas.

The citizens of Quincy, both the tax payers and those eligible to a draft, cannot but be under great obligations to their clerk, for the very economical manner in which he has prepared his work; which is pronounced by all who have had occasion to refer to it, to be the most accurate one in the SECOND DISTRICT.

EXTENSIVE SALE OF REAL ESTATE AT AUCTION. Colonel Ebenezer Adams sold the Barrell estate, corner of Hancock and Washington streets, at auction, on Thursday last, in lots. The following persons were the purchasers, and the sums which each respectively paid.

Two and Three were front lots.

Lot 2. 12,598 feet, at 71-8 cts. per foot. Joseph W. Robertson.

" 3. 15,672 ft. 93-4 cts. H. H. Faxon.

" 4. 6,563 " 45-8 " " "

" 5. 6,332 " 4 " Peter Turner.

" 7. $100 for the lot. Henry H. Faxon.

" 8. $85 00 " " "

" 9. $67 50 " " "

" 10. $125 00 " " "

"QUINCY. In visiting some of the schools of Quincy recently, we saw in the High School a register which was, to our eye, very beautiful, almost as neat and spotless as when it came from the printer's hand, save only the names of seventy earnest scholars. Not a mark for absence or tardiness for the week previous to our visit, and but five or six thus far for the term. One girl suffering severely from a painful felon was still on duty, and, indeed, had not been absent for two years. Another girl who walks three miles to school, had been absent but three days in two years, and then for the sake of seeing her father during a short furlough from the army. One girl who walks two miles has not been absent for two years. Another girl who walks two miles and a half, has not been absent for eighteen months. We conversed with each of these scholars. They are in firm health, and say they are never unfitted for study by their exercise, but are rather refreshed and invigorated. We give these details to meet the theory that has needlessly divided districts and multiplied schools, or hindered the union and proper grading of schools, and the establishment of High Schools; the theory that the school-house must be near a man's door. Here are three scholars who live most remote, and yet are remarkable for health, regularity of attendance, and scholarship. Such instances are by no means rare. Very many similar facts come under our observation in all parts of the State.

The whole number in the Quincy High School last summer was 80, and the average attendance was 78 7-8. This is a remarkably high average for any school, and the more so where the pupils come from all parts of a town as large as Quincy."—Massachusetts Teacher.

LAI D OVER. The interesting communication of our correspondent A. has been laid over, for our next week's issue.

VALUE OF ANCIENT FURNITURE. At an auction in Braintree, one day last week, a looking-glass was sold for $20 25; the same glass was sold at auction in this town about forty years since for ten dollars.

A RELIC OF OTHER DAYS. The oldest building on Washington street, Boston, on the corner of Water street, has been demolished. It has stood for a century and a half, and was the place of publication of the fifth newspaper in Boston—the Weekly Rehearsal, started in 1731; the Boston Evening Post, started in 1735, was also published in this building; it died in 1775.

From the Army of the South.

HILTON HEAD, (S. C.) April 20, 1864.

As I had some leisure time, I thought I would write to you, to let you know what was going on down here in rebellion—and that is very little; still, there is one thing I want to tell you about—an execution of two soldiers, of the 6th Connecticut Volunteers, for the crime of deserting to the enemy; one of them was a hard nut; he broke out of the Provost guard-house three times; last Sunday they were brought out to be shot; we were notified the night before to prepare ourselves, as our presence would be required; so, after inspection, we went to dinner, and at two o'clock, took up our line of march to the place selected for the execution; it was on a large sandy plain, outside of the breast works. There were three Regiments of Infantry and our Battalion of Cavalry. We were drawn up in a hollow square, with one side open, which was for the prisoners; we formed the square with eyes to the front, and no one was allowed to turn his head to the right or left. We were in advance of the funeral cortege; but soon, the distant peals of the muffled drum, and shrill life were heard, playing the dead march; it was most solemn and impressive; and for such an occasion, nearly overwhelming to our feelings; on it came, drawing nearer and nearer—still, we could not see them; at last they came up and passed down in front of us; first, came sixteen men of their own company with muskets at the carry; then the hospital wagon, with the prisoners, seated on the coffin, attended by two officers and a Catholic clergyman; followed by eight men with reversed arms; in this order the procession passed round, and stopped in the centre of the square; when the prisoners got out and sat down on their coffins, which had been removed to the ground; while the men, to whose lot it had fallen to execute this unpleasant duty, were loading, the prisoners knelt beside their coffins, with the priest between them, who made a fervent prayer, blessing them, and then shook hands with them for the last time; then two officers advanced, and bade the doomed men to kneel by the side of their graves—when their hands were secured behind them—a white handkerchief drawn over their eyes—closing their vision forever on this beautiful world; to me, this was the most affecting scene of all. After these ceremonies had been gone through with, the firing party advanced within six paces, when the officer in command drew his sword, waved it once in the air, and the unfortunate men fell dead upon the ground, weltering in their gore; one died immediately, the other lingered about a minute or so. One of the victims, Henry Shumaker by name, received six bullets through his breast, and two through his heart; his companion, Henry Stark, had five through his breast. As soon as they were pronounced dead, the troops were formed in procession, and passed in review of the dead bodies—the Cavalry at the head leading the van. The next day orders came to dispatch forty men to Bradocks Point, on picket duty; this, with drill, is all we have to do. While I am writing, an orderly has rode through the camp summoning us to be in readiness, as soon as transportation can be had, to leave this place for Fortress Monroe; that will soon be, my next, therefore, will be dated from the soil of Old Virginia. In the mean time, adieu.

Deaths.

In this town, on the 3d inst., Mrs. Sally, wife of Mr. Lemuel Brackett, and youngest daughter of Rev. Peter Whitney, formerly minister at Northborough, Mass., aged 82 years and 6 months.

SOME ON SUGAR. A lady in this town, say the Cape Ann Advertiser, sent her husband the sugar, lately, to buy a dollar's worth of sugar, as the good wife was nearly out. The sugar not appearing, a few days afterward she asked her husband what he had done with it. He replied, after a few moments hesitation and head scratching, "that he must have put it in his OTHER VEST POCKET."

THE HALL PROPERTY. The homestead of the late James Hall of Milton, was sold at auction, on Tuesday last, to Nathaniel H. Beals, Esq., for the sum of twelve hundred and fifty dollars.

The Pope Farm, which was advertised to be sold the same day, was postponed.

REAL ESTATE IS VERY ACTIVE in Boston. Shrewd capitalists are looking about for desirable stores and dwelling houses for safe investment. There is a better demand for stores and dwellings at advanced rents than before the war. The present cost of materials and labor gives an increased value to all improved property.

Excellent paper is manufactured from the wood of oak, walnut, pine, chestnut and various vegetables without any rags. A reduction in price from fifty to eighty per cent. is predicted.

Norman Cheffee, of South Wilbraham, who died a few days since, had his coffin in his house more than twelve years before. He made it himself, sawing the boards in his own saw-mill. He also dug his own grave two years ago, walled and cemented it, prepared a large stone to cover it, and erected a monument suitably inscribed, leaving a blank to be filled with the date of his death.

In London, a few years ago, the butchers combined to put up the price of meat, and the people resisted it, resolving to consume the article but three times a week; the result was a tumble in prices, that must happen here would people do the same thing.

The plan of substituting petroleum in steam engines instead of coal, is being widely adopted. The Government is trying it on a war steamer.

Quincy, May 7.

THE MAY FESTIVAL given on Monday evening last, at the Town Hall, for the benefit of the Ladies' Soldiers' Aid Association, was a large gathering—the hall was full to overflowing, during the evening, by an interested audience, who appeared highly to enjoy the rich entertainment which had been provided for them, and duly to appreciate the motive which had brought them together. Every thing passed off most pleasantly. There were many incidents deserving of notice. We congratulate the fortunate purchaser of the "Guess Cake," and his generous offer to donate it to any party that were connoisseurs inclined, and who lacked this little indispensable to consummate the act. It may be the means of bringing two loving hearts together. This is the last exhibition of the kind, we understand for the present. It was successfully closed. The Society has been enabled to do much for the sufferings of the poor soldier, which will long be remembered with gratitude.

U. S. 10-40 BONDS.

These Bonds are issued under the Act of Congress of March 8th, 1864, which provides that all Bonds issued under this Act shall be EXEMPT FROM TAXATION by or under any state or municipal authority. Subscriptions to these Bonds are received in United States notes or notes of National Banks. They are TO BE REDEEMED IN COIN, at the pleasure of the Government, at any period not less than ten nor more than forty years from their date, and until their redemption FIVE PER CENT. INTEREST WILL BE PAID IN COIN, on Bonds of not over one hundred dollars annually and on all other Bonds semi-annually. The interest is payable on the first days of March and September in each year.

Subscribers will receive either Registered or Coupon Bonds, as they may prefer. Registered Bonds are recorded on the books of the U. S. Treasurer, and can be transferred only on the owner's order. Coupon Bonds are payable to bearer, and are more convenient for commercial uses.

Subscribers to this loan will have the option of having their Bonds draw interest from March 1st, by paying the accrued interest in coin—or in United States notes, or the notes of National Banks, adding fifty per cent. for premium.) or receive their drawing interest from the date of subscription and deposit. As these Bonds are

Exempt from Municipal or State Taxation,

At the present rate of premium on gold they pay

Over Eight per cent. Interest in currency, and are of equal convenience as a permanent or temporary investment.

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to lenders as the various descriptions of U. S. Bonds. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties or stock companies or separate communities only is pledged for payment, while for the debts of the United States the whole property of the country is held to secure the payment of both principal and interest in coin.

These Bonds may be subscribed for in sums from $50 up to any magnitude, on the same terms, and are thus made equally available to the small lender and the largest capitalist. They can be converted into money at any moment, and the holder will have the benefit of the interest.

It may be useful to state in this connection that the total Federal Debt of the United States on which interest is payable in gold, on the 31st day of March, 1864, was $768,965,000. The interest on this debt for the coming fiscal year will be $45,837,126, while the customs revenue in gold for the current fiscal year, ending June 30th, 1864, has been as far at the rate of over $100,000,000 per annum.

It will be seen that even the present gold revenues of the Government are largely in excess of the wants of the Treasury for the payment of gold interest, while the recent increase of the tariff will doubtless raise the annual receipts from customs on the same amount of importations, to $150,000,000 per annum.

Instructions to the National Banks acting as loan agents were not issued from the United States Treasury until March 26, but in the first three weeks of April the subscriptions averaged more than TEN MILLIONS A WEEK. Subscriptions will be received by the First National Bank of Boston, Mass. Second National Bank of Boston, Mass. National Bank of the Republic, Boston Mass. First National Bank of Amesbury, Mass. GENTLEMEN'S HATS,

Poetry.

May.

Hail to thee, May, bright beautiful May!
The blossoms have crowned thee queen,
And added a sceptre (a hawthorn spray)
To thy royal robe of green.
Thou hast butterfly courtiers not a few,
In amber and purple dress;
While round thy waist shines a zone of dew,
The diamonds thou lovest best.

Hail to thee, May, thou laughing sprite!
Thy minstrel the wild bird train,
Around thy neck, in a wreath of light,
Is the sunbeam's golden chain.
Thou hast emerald lamps by the glow-worms lit,
Where the low grass blades sway,
And violets breathe where the bee doth flit;
Hail to thee, graceful May.

Hail, fairest May, the country sweet
Sings the harp-tuned breeze,
And forests echo with children's feet,
Searching for flowers 'neath the trees.
In the porch sits the grand old bent with age,
Where the apple blossoms cling,
And reads by turns in the sacred page
And God's other volume, Spring.

Bless thee, sweet May, from the city's smoke;
Thanks for thy woodflowers fair!
Do they not breathe of the elm and oak,
Waving in God's free air?
Whisper they not of the free birds' flight
The brook that the willow bows,
As the toll-worn one gives his hard-earned mile
For a simple woodland flower?

Hail to thee, May! In the crowded street,
'E'en in the dingy lane,
Many a May flower blondest sweet,
Pent by a window-pane.
Trees, with their blossoms of sullied white,
Over the brick walls stray,
Making the dark things of earth more bright;
Give thee all hail, bright May.

The First Wine Drinker.

FROM THE GERMAN.

When Noah from the Ark out-trod,
Before him stood, they say, his God,
Who smelt the altar's savory smell,
And spake, "God Noah, this is well,
So while you heed my mild behests,
I'll grant all rational requests."

Then out spoke Noah, frank enough,
"Pure water, Lord, is washy stuff,
Besides, Lord, in it is interred
The race of man, and beast, and bird,
A poor old man like me would fain
Some healthier sort of drink obtain."

God took him straight to Paradise,
And gave him, with much good advice,
A healthy vine-stock, adding there,
"This needs the very best of care:
And Noah, thus and thus it grows;
Ticked to death old Noah goes."

He calls wives, daughters, sons together,
And sets to work in highest feather,
Vineyards he plants in circles wide,
(For Noah knew the buttered side.)
Builds cellars, presses out the wine,
And fills his casks in many a line.

As Noah was a holy man,
He praised his Lord, and tossed the can;
He drank in honor of the giver,
And found it harmed not brain or liver,
For after that the deluge dried,
Four hundred years passed ere he died.

A man of sense may hence opine
It does no harm to quaff good wine,
And earnest Christians need not think
By water to dilute their drink;
For in it Heaven's wrath once interred,
As Noah said, man, beast and bird.

Anecdotes.

A loafer having got a heavy load on, fetched up against the side of a house which had been newly painted. Shoving himself clear by a vigorous effort, he took one glimpse at his shoulder, another at the house, and a third at his head, and exclaimed:
"Well, that's a damned careless trick in whoever painted that house, to leave it standing out all night for people to run against."

Charlotte, said a gentleman to his daughter one day, you are really too piddy, and I fear never give yourself time for reflection.
"Pon honor, then, pa," replied the young lady, laughing, you may make yourself perfectly easy on that account, for I generally spend half the day at the looking glass.

Biddy, said a lady, we must have saucages for tea this evening, I expect company.
Yes, ma'am.

Tea-time arrived, and with it the company, the table was spread, and the tea was summing, but no saucages appeared. Where were your saucages, Biddy? the lady inquired.
And sure they're in the tay-pot, ma'am didn't you tell me we must have 'em for tay?

Tom bought a gallon of gin to take home and by way of a label, wrote his name upon a card—which happened to be the seven of clubs—and tied it to the handle. A friend coming along, and observing the jug, quietly remarked:
"There's an awful careless way to leave that liquor."

Why? said Tom.
Because somebody might come along with the eight spot, and take it.

Sally, said a fellow to a girl who had red hair, keep away from me or you'll set me on fire.
No danger of that, replied Sally, you are too green to burn.

capacity for a great variety of work. It will sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread. Great and recent improvements make

our Family Sewing Machine most reliable

and most durable, and most certain in action

at all rates of speed. It makes the interlocked stitch which is the best stitch known.

Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity,

can see at a glance, how to use the Letter A Family Sewing Machine. Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in elegant and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine

is a useful kind. It protects the machine

when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work. While

some of the Cases, made out of the choicest

woods, are finished in the simplest and chast-

est manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb

manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family

Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family

sewing as our Manufacturing machines are

for manufacturing purposes.

The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

For the Patriot.

The Four Questions.

When the bells of sixteen gets sight of a bean,

She scarcely can keep through the sticks of her fan,

Her heart all a flutter, her cheeks all aglow,

She tremblingly simpers out, "Who is the man?"

Sweet twenty has brought her to years of discretion;

She blushes no longer, but alters her plan;

She thinks of the pocket, the place, the profession

And looks round the circle with, "What is the man?"

At thirty each day that she looks in the mirror,

She sees that some leaf in the rose has grown wan,

Sees the circle of lovers grow thin, and in terror

She duns the deceivers with, "Which is the man?"

At forty, she changes her tone, grows romantic;

Finis! pretty to sigh, plays the harp, and looks woe;

Hunts watering places and steams the Atlantic,

For the point of her travel is, "Where is the man?"

L.

Scraps.

The wisest man may be wiser to-day, than he was yesterday, and to-morrow than he is to-day. Total freedom from change would imply total freedom from error.

He who betrays another's secrets, because he has quarreled with him, was never worthy the sacred name of friend; a breach of kindness on one side, will not justify a breach of trust on the other.

There would not be half the difficulty in doing right, but for the frequent occurrences of cases where the lesser virtues are on the side of wrong.

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

A CROWD. The sale of livery stable stock at the Hancock House, on Tuesday last, was very largely attended by the citizens of this and the neighboring towns. Horses, carriages, etc., were sold at good prices, still the purchasers appeared well pleased with their bargains.

REMOVAL. We would call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Mr. N. B. Fernald, in another column. Owing to the large demand for goods in his line of trade, he has found his old quarters too small for the convenience of himself and customers, and therefore has improved the opportunity of making a most excellent change. His patrons will find ample room to examine his unusually large assortment of furniture of every kind and quality. We noticed at his store one day recently, some excellent oil cloth carpets of beautiful figures, also some splendid picture frames. Those in want will do well to give him a call.

PHOTOGRAPH. We have received an excellent likeness of our occasional correspondent from Boston, who writes over the signature "A." Will he be so kind as to accept our thanks, both for his picture and articles until we can better repay him.

HORRIBLE. Out of three hundred and seventy Union prisoners at Annapolis, recently exchanged, more than three hundred are so completely imbecile as to believe they are still at Belle Isle, being utterly oblivious of the fact that they have been removed.

SEVENTY-FIVE MILES OF PORK. During the pork season just passed, Illinois packed 1,273,390 hogs, of an average weight of one hundred and ninety pounds. If these were placed in cars, ten tons in each car, each car measuring two rods, it would make a train seventy-five miles long. Allowing twenty cars to each locomotive, it would take six hundred locomotives to draw the train.

RECONSTRUCTION BILL. Thaddeus Stevens' amendment to the Reconstruction Bill provides that three-fourths of the non-seceding States may amend the Constitution; that the conquered seceded States shall be considered as Territories, and that all lands therein belonging to rebels owning more than one hundred acres, and all lands, tenements or houses belonging to rebels, worth three thousand dollars, or more shall become the public property of the United States.

WEST POINT ACADEMY was founded in 1802, since which time the total number of cadets, actually admitted to its privileges is 4,626. Of this number, the State of New York supplied 650, Pennsylvania, 424, Virginia, 379, Ohio 248, Massachusetts 232, Kentucky, 196, Maryland 179, Tennessee 178, South Carolina 159, Georgia 139, Connecticut 102, and those appointed at large numbered 330. The actual graduates amounted in all to 2,020.

SANITARY REGULATIONS. Captain Moore, who has charge of the burial of soldiers in Washington, has issued the following order: In order to prevent the unpleasant odor caused by the removal of the dead from their graves, and as a sanitary measure, no exhumation will be permitted at the Government burial ground from and after May 1, 1864, until October 1, 1864.

A QUERY. It is a mystery to us that ladies of good judgment and taste will spend their time in travelling about the muddy streets of a crowded city a whole day long, entering store after store, in search of a new dress pattern, and, at last, after becoming tired and weary, purchase an article which does not, on a careful examination at home, prove to be what they expected. Now, we would advise our lady readers to buy their dress goods at the stores in Quincy. A richer variety, we are satisfied, cannot be found, than that offered at the store of Mr. Caleb Packard. His stock has been largely augmented within the last few days, and some splendid patterns he is offering at quite reasonable prices.

DEAR PUBLIC. A special invitation has been extended to all of us, to make Mr. Lombard a call at his rooms, 90 Hancock street, and examine his new and rich style of goods, from which to select a pattern, to be made up to order—par excellence. The expansion of the currency, should lead to an expansion of ideas on this subject; and if only for appearance, to make an effort to improve the outward man, and put ourselves on a respectable footing with the rest of mankind. His prices, on many articles, are marked down at as low a figure as when gold was the ruling standard; and his means and facilities to please and accommodate, more extended. But we must not anticipate; read his advertisement, and then pay a visit.

The Draft in the Second District, commenced at Taunton yesterday.

United States 10-40 Bonds.

This loan, limited to two hundred million of dollars, is fast being taken up, it is said, by the people. A moderate portion of it has been subscribed for in Europe; but Secretary Chase prefers that our own people should have the entire advantage; therefore, the public are respectfully invited to the subject. Subscriptions to these Bonds are received in United States notes, or notes of National Banks. They are to be redeemed in coin, at the pleasure of the Government, at any period not less than ten nor more than forty years from their date; and until their redemption, five per cent. interest will be paid in coin—on bonds not over one hundred dollars, annually, and on all other bonds, semi-annually. The value of these bonds, are also increased, from the circumstance of their being exempt from municipal or State taxation, which, according to the rate of taxes levied in various parts of the country, at the present rate of premium on gold, would amount to over eight per cent. interest.

The perfect security of such investments is a fact to be considered. In other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties, communities, etc., only are pledged for payment, whereas, in this case, the whole property of the country is held to secure the payment of both principal and interest in coin. We perceive that the National Banks of Boston, and elsewhere, and other business institutions, are authorized to receive subscriptions, and furnish any information required.

There is an article, more explicit, on the same subject, which will be found in the columns of our paper to-day, to which we would call the attention of the reader.

A TONGUELESS BELLE.—(Bell.) Not the fashionable belle, who crowd our thoroughfares—but the grum sentinel who looks down upon us from his watch tower on the Stone Temple. As the worthy individual, whose duty calls him thither, mid-day and evening, essayed on the evening of Saturday, April 30th, to warn our citizens that it was time to close their businesses, seek their homes, and the repose which is Nature's due, he was frustrated in his purpose. Whirl the machine round as hard as he would—with the muscle and nerve of a strong man; still, there was no response—no sound elicited. What could it mean? A journey aloft, therefore, was indispensable to learn the reason; groping his way through dark passages, what was his dismay on reaching the spot, to find his old and tried friend in a dumb-dumb—having lost the organ of articulation; the unruly member had dropped from the brazen mouth to the floor. Whether it was the effect of a natural cause, or the explosion of a paper missile, our informant saith not.

THE TAX BOOK of the city of Boston is just out. There were thirty-five persons who paid a tax of over $5,000 last year; 519 who paid $1,000, and 1,282 who paid $500. Mr. Augustus Hemmenway is the richest man in Boston. He is taxed on $275,000 of real estate and $2,000,000 of personal, or a total property of $2,275,000. The next largest taxpayers are Alpheus Hardy and others, as trustees of the Sears' estate; James M. Beebe & Company; Boston Gas Light Company; Fifty Associates, and David Sears, (who is taxed upon $891,000 real estate and $300,000 personal, or a total of $1,191,000.)

METAL-TIPPED SHOES. Shoes are an important item in the expense of clothing children, as every parent will understand. They invariably wear out their shoes at the toe first, and not unfrequently before the other parts are a quarter worn. Children's shoes with Metal tips never wear out at the toe, and it is safe to say that on an average one pair with them will more than out-wear three pairs without them. We believe all the shoe dealers keep them.—Herald.

DOMESTIC ECONOMY. One of the best remedies for the high prices of provisions is bean broth, beef-shin soup, codfish and potatoes, and plenty of bread, the material for making which is not unreasonably high. These things are healthy substitutes for roast beef, sirloin and mutton chops.

CANNOT HELP IT. The Daily Journal (of Wilmington, N. Carolina,) under the above caption, informs its patrons that it cannot help putting its subscription price at thirty dollars per annum. Think of that, ye newspaper patrons who consider three dollars per annum a large price! The same paper says there has been a great decline in household commodities, and that sugar and tobacco declined one dollar a pound in a single day. Wilmington must be a good place for speculators. In that city, also, common brown sheeting is quoted at six dollars twelve cents per yard.

UNFORTUNATE. We learn from the Abington Standard, that owing to an accident by which their outside form was thrown into pi, they will be unable to issue their paper next week. If you should happen to have some poor paying subscribers that you intend crossing off your books, friend Easterbrook, it may bring them to their senses, as they will find out how hard it is to get along without their village paper.

THE DOLLAR MONTHLY. The June number of this excellent monthly, is on our table. It came, as usual, with its well filled pages of good and entertaining reading.

U. S. 10-40 BONDS.

These Bonds are issued under the Act of Congress of March 8th, 1891, which provides that all Bonds issued under this Act shall be EXEMPT FROM TAXATION by or under any state or municipal authority. Subscriptions to these Bonds are received in United States notes or notes of National Banks. They are TO BE REDEEMED IN COIN, at the pleasure of the Government, at any period not less than ten nor more than forty years from their date, and until their redemption FIVE PER CENT. INTEREST WILL BE PAID IN COIN, on Bonds of not over one hundred dollars annually and on all other Bonds semi-annually. The interest is payable on the first days of March and September in each year.

Subscribers will receive either Registered or Coupon Bonds, as they may prefer. Registered Bonds are recorded on the books of the U. S. Treasurer, and can be transferred only on the owner's order. Coupon Bonds are payable to bearer, and are more convenient for commercial uses.

Subscribers to this loan will have the option of having their Bonds draw interest from March 1st, by paying the accrued interest in coin—for in United States notes, or the notes of National Banks, adding fifty per cent. for premium, or receive them drawing interest from the date of subscription and deposit. As these Bonds are Exempt from Municipal or State Taxation, their value is increased from one to three per cent. per annum, according to the rate of tax levies in various parts of the country.

At the present rate of premium on gold they pay

Over Eight per cent. Interest

in currency, and are of equal convenience as a permanent or temporary investment.

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to lenders as the various descriptions of U. S. Bonds. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties or stock companies or separate communities only is pledged for payment, while for the debts of the United States the whole property of the country is held to secure the payment of both principal and interest in coin.

These Bonds may be subscribed for in sums from $50 up to any magnitude, on the same terms, and are thus made equally available to the smallest lender and the largest capitalist. They can be converted into money at any moment, and the holder will have the benefit of the interest.

It may be useful to state in this connection that the total Funded Debt of the United States on which interest is payable in gold, on the 31 day of March, 1891, was $768,965,000. The interest on this debt for the coming fiscal year will be $45,937,126, while the customs revenue in gold for the current fiscal year, ending June 30th, 1891, has been so far at the rate of over $100,000,000 per annum.

It will be seen that even the present gold revenues of the Government are largely in excess of the wants of the Treasury for the payment of gold interest, while the recent increase of the tariff will doubtless raise the annual receipts from customs on the same amount of importations, to $150,000,000 per annum.

Instructions to the National Banks acting as loan agents were not issued from the United States Treasury until March 26th, but in the first three weeks of April the subscriptions averaged more than TEN MILLIONS A WEEK.

Subscriptions will be received by the First National Bank of Boston, Mass.
Second National Bank of Boston, Mass.
National Bank of the Republic, Boston, Mass.
First National Bank of Amesbury, Mass.
First National Bank of Braintree, Mass.
First National Bank of Fall River, Mass.

AND BY ALL NATIONAL BANKS

which are depositaries of Public money, and all

Respectable Banks and Bankers

throughout the country, (acting as agents of the National Depositary Banks,) will furnish further information on application and

Poetry.

The Maiden's Wish.

Wanted, a friend, that is honest and true,
At the hour of auspicious need,
With a head that is clear, and with quick hands to do—
(Whenever I've a garden to weed!)

Wanted, a friend, who will hear what I say,
Be it wisdom, or nonsense, or both,
Who will treasure the wheat and the chaff throw away—
(To contradict ever be both!)

Wanted, a friend, who is cheerful and gay,
Never heeding the cold, or the heat;
Who intends to "be happy," and let come what may,
(Dares to wear his old clothes in the street!)

Wanted, a friend, who is not short, or tall,
Of a medium stature—not slim,
Yet he need not be handsome, or still more than all,
An Adonis, (I do not want him!)

Wanted, a friend, with large, dark eyes that beam
Bright with purity, sweetness; whose hue
Is a soft and deep brown, like the moonlight's pale gleam,
(For a man's eyes should never be blue!)

Wanted, a friend, who will smile at my joy,
Who will sorrow if trouble should come,
And whose sympathy's sure if 'er grief should annoy—
(And who never drinks cordials or rum!)

Wanted, a friend, who is ever content
To remain on the safe, solid land,
And who never "a-sailing" or "down fishing" went—
(To be sea-sick or stuck in the sand!)

Wanted, in fact, a nice, every-day
Jolly fellow, with plenty of cash,
Who will never refuse my dry-goods' bill to pay—
And who never will wear a moustache!

Should such an one offer—I wish that he might,
I would all my encouragement lend;
I'll refer him to papa, I'm sure I would be right
To take him for more than a friend!

Mind your own Concerns.

Yes, mind your own concerns, my friends
For they are yours alone;
Don't talk about your neighbor's faults,
But strive to mend your own;
What if he does not always lead
A truly perfect life—
Supposing that he sometimes frets,
Or quarrels with his wife,
Don't meddle—let him know, my friend,
Your better nature spurs
To set the spy on him or his—
So, mind your own concerns!

Yes, mind your own concerns, my friend,
And presently you'll find
That you are fully occupied,
And have enough to mind.
What is it to you if Snooks or Spooks
Should wed with Polly Jones?
What is it to you if lawyer Grab
A plump half-million owns?
The money is not yours, my friend,
Though golden stores he earns;
So do not strive to count his wealth,
But mind your own concerns!

Yes, mind your own concerns, my friends,
It were a better plan,
Than always to be spying out
The deeds of brother man.
Remember that all persons have—
Though hidden from the view—
Thoughts that to them in right belong,
And not at all to you;
And also bear in mind, my friend,
A generous nature worms
No secret from a brother's breast,
So, mind your own concerns!

Anecdotes.

An Irishman was requested by a lady, notorious for her parsimoniousness and niggardly habits, to do for her some handiwork. The job was performed to her complete satisfaction.

Pat, said the old miser, I must treat you.
God bless your honor, ma'am, replied Pat.
Which would you prefer, a glass of porter or tumbler of punch?
I don't wish to be troublesome, ma'am, said the Irishman, turning round and winking at the thin-ribbed butler, but I'll take the one while you're making the other.

A lady, teaching her little daughter, four years old, pointed to something in the book and asked, what is that, my dear?
Why, don't you know, inquired the child.
Yes, and the mother; but I wish to find out if you know.
Well, responded the little Miss, I do know.
Tell me then, if you please, said the lady.
Why no, insisted the little one with an arch look, you know what it is, and there is no need of saying anything more about it.

A lad who had lately gone to service, having had salad served up for dinner every day of the week, ran away, and when asked why he left his place, replied—they made me eat grass in the summer, and I was afraid they'd make me eat it in the winter, and I could not stand that, so I went off.

An old bachelor being told that a young man of his acquaintance had just got married.
Alas! said he, what a pity it is one should come to misfortune so young!

physician in Boston.

U. S. 10-40 BONDS.

These Bonds are issued under the Act of Congress of March 8th, 1864, which provides that all Bonds issued under this Act shall be EX-EMPT FROM TAXATION by or under any state or municipal authority. Subscriptions to these Bonds are received in United States notes
or notes of National Banks. They are TO BE REDEEMED IN COIN, at the pleasure of the Government, at any period not less than ten more than forty years from their date, and until their redemption FIVE PER CENT. INTER-EST WILL BE PAID IN COIN, on Bonds of
not over one hundred dollars annually and on all other Bonds semi-annually. The interest is payable on the first days of March and September in each year.

Subscribers will receive either Registered or Coupon Bonds, as they may prefer. Registered
Bonds are recorded on the books of the U. S.
Treasurer, and can be transferred only on the owner's order. Coupon Bonds are payable to bearer, and are more convenient for commercial uses.

Subscribers to this loan will have the option
of having their Bonds draw interest from March 1st, by paying the accrued interest in coin—or in United States notes, or the notes of National Banks, adding fifty per cent. (or premium,) or receive their drawing interest from the date of subscription and deposit. As these Bonds are

Exempt from Municipal or State Taxation,

their value is increased from one to three per cent. per annum, according to the rate of tax levies in various parts of the country.

At the present rate of premium on gold they pay

Over Eight per cent. Interest

in currency, and are of equal convenience as a permanent or temporary investment.

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to lenders as the various descriptions of U. S. Bonds. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties
or stock companies or separate communities only is pledged for payment, while for the debts of the United States the whole property of the country is held to secure the payment of both principal and interest in coin.

These Bonds may be subscribed for in sums
from $50 up to any magnitude, on the same terms,
and are thus made equally available to the smallest lender and the largest capitalist. They can be converted into money at any moment, and the holder will have the benefit of the interest.

It may be useful to state in this connection
that the total Funded Debt of the United States
on which interest is payable in gold, on the 31 day of March, 1864, was $768,963,000. The interest on this debt for the current fiscal year will be $45,937,126, while the customs revenue
in gold for the current fiscal year, ending June 30th, 1864, has been so far at the rate of over $100,000,000 per annum.

It will be seen that even the present gold revenues of the Government are largely in excess of the wants of the Treasury for the payment of gold interest, while the recent increase of the tariff will doubtless raise the annual receipts from customs on the same amount of importations, to $150,000,000 per annum.

Instructions to the National Banks acting as loan agents were not issued from the United States Treasury until March 25, but in the first three weeks of April the subscriptions averaged more than TEN MILLIONS A WEEK.

Subscriptions will be received by the

First National Bank of Boston, Mass.

National Bank of the Republic, Boston Mass.

First National Bank of Amesbury, Mass.

First National Bank of Barre, Mass.

First National Bank of Fall River, Mass.

First National Bank of Marlboro, Mass.

First National Bank of New Bedford, Mass.

First National Bank of Newburyport, Mass.

First National Bank of Springfield, Mass.

AND BY ALL NATIONAL BANKS

which are depositaries of Public money, and all

Respectable Banks and Bankers

throughout the country, (acting as agents of the National Depository Banks,) will furnish further information on application and Afford every Facility to Subscribers.

Poetry.

The Poet Child.

Mother—dear mother, a child one day
Exclaimed, with a languishing sigh,
Oh why do the spring-tides fade away,
And the flowers with their freshness die?
If our life could be one long sunny spring,
If around us were clustering bowers,
Where beautiful birds might dance and sing,
What an exquisite life were ours!

We might rove, in our sport, the livelong day,
Amid scenes enchantingly fair;
And, when tired at length, of our childish play,
Our couch with the wild birds share—
And lie down to rest, in the dreamy hush
Of the glades of the greenwood deep,
Till the lull of the murmuring fountain's gush
Might soothe us at length to sleep.

Dear child, the mother tenderly said,
What a fanciful scheme you have drawn—
A couch in the shadowy forest glade!
—A home on the summer lawn!

Yet I think when some few fleeting years were Past,
Of this life with its music and flowers,
I should hear your sweet tones whisper at last,
What a dull sad life is ours!

And remember, child, the bountiful hand
Which maketh the spring decay,
Bids the bloom that you love into fruits expand
Ere it utterly dies away;
And thus, if some sad and sorrowful hours
Oppress our hearts with their gloom,
They but chasten these turbulent souls of ours
And prepare them for joys to come.

Keep to the Right.

Keep to the right! if storms assail,
If tempests rise, if billows roar
Still fearless of the storm and gale
Whist on this world's tempestuous shore,
Be evermore
The words which nerve thine arm of might
Keep to the right!

If'er thy pathway clouds should lower,
If friends desert, if fortune flee,
Unheeding friends, or wealth, or power,
Still let thy watchword ever be,
On life's rough sea,
Or in prosperity's broad light,
Keep to the right!

Keep to the right! if fortune smile,
If love is true, if friends are near,
Let not the witch thy steps beguile,
Let not thy course one instant veer,
For in their ear
Sounds through the din of pleasures bright
Keep to the right!

And, oh! if stern Misfortune's hand
Upon thy brow should heavily fall,
Yield thou not to its iron band,
Let not its shade thine heart appal,
For over all
The precept shines in lines of light,
Keep to the right!

Keep to the right! move forward still!
Boldly thine onward course pursue!
Press up life's steep and rugged hill!
Be ever constant, ever true,
Keeping in view
The words which nerve thine arm of might,
Keep to the right!

The Contented Man.

Why need I strive or sigh for wealth?
It is enough for me
That Heaven has sent me strength and health
A spirit glad and free!
Grateful these blessings to receive,
I sing my hymn at morn and eve.
On some, what floods of riches flow,
Houses, herds, and gold, have they,
Yet life's best joys they never know,
But fret their hours away.
The more they have, they seek increase;
Complaints and cravings never cease.

Anecdotes.

Doctor, said Bonnerges, come, throw away your lancet and pill boxes, and let us go off somewhere for a week or two.
Yes, replied Bolus, but what will my patients do in the meantime?
Get well, to be sure, was the reply of the son of thunder.

A modest young lady at the table desiring a leg of chicken, said:
"I'll take the part which ought to be dressed in drawers."
A young gentleman opposite immediately replied:
"I'll take the part which ought to wear the bustle."
The young lady fainted, and was carried out on a salver.

Do you know the prisoner, Mr. Jones?
Yes, to the bone.
What is his character?
Didn't know as he had any.
Does he live near you?
So near that he has only spent five shillings for firewood in eight years.

Two little children were talking of the moon the other evening. Charley said solemnly, in his imperfect pronunciation, that it was God.
No, it ain't, said Sarah. It ain't big enough.
Well replied the boy, determined not to be put down altogether, it is the hole he looks through, anyhow.

For the Patriot.
On the Death of Mrs. Abbie C. Newcomb.

Dearest Sister, thou hast left us,
Left us in the bright spring time;
Gone to re-unite with loved ones
In a more congenial clime.

Here the buds are just unfolding,
Their bright petals to the sun;
There the flowers peep out in bloom,
And their work is never done.

Thou hast passed away from trouble,
And the cold world's bitter frosts;
Gone where loved ones are preparing
For thy head a glittering crown.

Of we're joined with thee in singing
Praises to the God of love;
Thou no more wilt join our number
But wilt join the choir above.

Peaceful be thy silent slumber,
Peaceful be thy home above;
There the heart of true affection
Softens with its silent love.

Thou hast left on earth an orphan,
One who'll watch thee with a care
Through the thorny paths of life,
Till he is transplanted, where

No temptations can assail him,
And where thou can't lead the way;
To those mansions fair and lovely
Where his feet can never stray.

We still hope again to meet you,
When we leave these earthly shores;
In that summer land we'll greet thee
Where sad partings come no more.

CONTEMPLATION. There is no lasting pleasure but contemplation; all others grow flat and insipid upon frequent use; and when a man hath run through a set of vanities, in the declension of his age he knows not what to do with himself if he cannot think. He saunters about from one dull business to another, to wear out time; and hath no reason to value life except he is afraid of death.

Those who are most weary of life, and yet the most unwilling to die, are such as have lived to no purpose—have rather breathed than lived.

Envy is unquestionably a high compliment, but a most ungracious one.

It is good to repeat old thoughts in new books, for the old words in which they stand are not read.

The door between us and heaven cannot be opened, if the door between us and our fellow-men is shut.

Nature when she makes a beautiful head is often so absorbed with admiration of her own work that she forgets the brains.

He who gets angry in a discussion, while his opponent keeps cool, holds the hot end of the poker.

Don't expect to be called a good fellow a moment longer than you consent to do precisely what other people wish you to do.

A romantic young man says that a woman's heart is like the moon; it changes continually, but always has a man in it.

Most of the shadows that cross our path through life are caused by standing in our own light.

Miscellaneous.

Winning and Losing a Wife.

The young crescent moon hung like a curved thread of silver, in the orange horizon that still burned and glowed where the sun had set more than an hour ago. From the woods that crested the gentle slope came at intervals the plaintive cry of the whippoorwill, and the whole scene was a delicious repose. The windows of the little inn that nestled among the oaks and beeches, were draped with roses, whose crimson cups swung out and fro in the fragrant wind that had been stealing perfume from a thousand sheltered copses and blossoming wild flowers. It was a pretty, picturesque spot enough; not a fashionable hotel, by any means, but merely a stopping place for stages that performed tri-weekly journeys over the steep roads to the mineral springs that lay eight or ten miles beyond.

In the white-curtained apartment, dignified by the title of "ladies' parlor," one passenger was quietly sauntering up and down, waiting for the arrival of the aforesaid stage. By the light of a solitary lamp on the table, she looked very fair and delicate in her dove-colored travelling dress, and the pearly edgings of lace round her throat and wrists. Her hair was just the shade of pale brown, that verges into gold, and the brilliant hazel eyes, fringed by long curled lashes, gave an expression of winning softness to the whole face. You never would have suspected that this girl was a belle and a beauty in drawing rooms of the metropolis; she seemed so formed by nature to deck the quiet solitude where she was at this moment. Thus capriciously does Fate scatter her girl blossoms over the face of the earth.

As she paced the floor, playing with a sprig of roses she had gathered from a saucy branch which fairly hung into the room, and singing softly to herself, the door opened, and a ruddy faced old gentleman, armed and equipped with carpet-bags unnumberable, made his appearance.

"The stage is ready, Mary! So soon, papa? So soon! I should think it was time! Here I've waited a mortal half-hour in this savage place, where a body can't so much as get a good cigar or a week old newspaper! I, for one, shall be glad to get away from it! Give me your travelling basket, my love; take care of the turn in the steps! Here we are safe inside. And away went the lumbering vehicle.

Hold on, driver, here's a pair of belated passengers for you!

The officiating Jehu drew in his horses with a jerk, as a merry voice hailed him from the roadside.

Room for two, inside? Just room, sir.

The door swung creaking on its hinges and closed again. Miss Vere's heart had involuntarily quickened its pulsation the moment those clear, pleasant accents had chimed on the heavy night air, and she knew that two rival lovers whose company she had been disappointed in not having in the stage, were about entering on the scene. Yet with all a woman's perversity, she sat silently in her corner, and was secretly rejoiced that papa was sleeping soundly in his corner.

The two young men, (Alfred Gordon and Frank Millbrooke), who had walked ahead to a commanding point to see the sun set, soon came into the stage, which again went jolting along until it suddenly stopped once more.

What are we stopping for now? exclaimed Gordon.

The stage door was opened with an abruptness that had nearly precipitated Mr. Gordon out on the green turf; and the driver shouted:

Gentlemen and ladies, can't you make room for one more?

The expectant passenger presented herself on the steps. By the uncertain glimmer of the box-lamps, she appeared to be a shriveled old woman, of nearly seventy, with a crumpled black bonnet, a pair of rusty cotton gloves, and an umbrella that must have been bequeathed to her from the days when there were giants upon the earth! Alfred Gordon viewed her tout ensemble with dismay.

Room, driver? what are you talking about? we are crowded already!

I know it, sir; but her darter's sick, and she wants to get to her right away. It's old Siah Smith's widder, down to—

I don't care whose widder she is—there isn't room. Look at her camphor bottles and musty craps—a nice companion to be jammed into a close coach with. Go ahead driver; judging from the looks of her shoes a walk of four or five miles won't hurt her.

Gordon! for shame! exclaimed Millbrooke, reprovingly. Have you forgotten that she is a weak and aged woman? I'll ride outside myself; Madame, will you accept my seat?

He alighted as he spoke, and courteously offered his aid to the venerable relic of Siah Smith, who being half deaf, and more than half blind, had been balancing on the steps in a state of hopeless bewilderment.

In vain Alfred Gordon shrugged his shoulders and curled his lip at the close vicinity of the camphor bottle and big wicker basket. Millbrooke arranged the old lady's worn shawl as carefully as if it had been the cashmere of a duchess.

I don't know who you may be, young sir, said the old creature, in a tremulous voice, as he at length withdrew, but I know you're a good son to your mother.

There was no reply. The door was closed, and the ponderous vehicle slowly got into motion again.

Mary Vere sat perfectly silent during the whole of this brief episode, but her cheek had glowed, and her eyes flashed more than once. And now that it was over, her heart had pulsated with a curious medley of emotions. It seemed as if, during those few moments, she had obtained an insight into the nature of the two gentlemen, which the months and years of her previous acquaintance with them, had failed to supply.

He wanting in politeness to the oldest and humblest of my sex, lacks respect for myself, reflected Miss Vere, with an instinctive straightening of her little form, and the man who treats the poor and aged with courtesy, is one of Nature's princes!

There was no more puzzling of the little brains to decide the important question which had greatly perplexed her a short time before. She was quite certain now which of her two admirers she preferred.

Heigho! I must have been asleep, yawned old Mr. Vere, as the stage stopped in front of the Union Hotel, and his daughter gently reminded him that they two were the only remaining occupants of the cumbersome old equipage.

Frank Millbrooke had courteously assisted the old lady with the crumpled bonnet to descend, and seen her safely under escort of her son-in-law, a tall young man, with light hair, and very expressive eyes who was walking up and down the piazza, engaged in igniting a cigar. Neither of them were quite inclined to believe in the evidence of their own eyesight, when the brilliant row of gas-lights over the hotel door streamed full upon the faces of the two last passengers, as Miss Vere sprang from the step, followed, more slowly, by her father.

Miss Vere, it is possible that we had the pleasure—pray take my arm.

But Mary turned haughtily away. Excuse me, Mr. Gordon; from what I this evening witnessed, I conclude you had rather not trouble yourself to extend courtesies to a lady.

And had accepted Millbrooke's proffered assistance ere the astonished Alfred had fairly comprehended the fact of her dismissal. Why, boys! exclaimed the cheerful voice of Mr. Vere, who had just succeeded in collecting the bags, baskets and magazines, which had been his travelling companions from New York, how on earth came you here? Upon my word, sir, said Gordon, I was not aware we were fellow passengers.

Nearly a fortnight afterwards he chanced to meet Millbrooke who had just been accompanying Miss Vere home from the most enchanting of greenwood picnics, and was now returning to secure some missing fan or parasol.

So, it is true that you are the acknowledged lover of the golden-haired Mary! said he, lightly. Well, Frank, accept my sincerest congratulations. But one thing I will insist on, my boy; if it hadn't been for that old hag with stove-in bonnet, I'd have entered the list with you and given you a pretty even combat!

Millbrooke smiled; it was impossible not to do so.

And I'll tell you what, Frank, pursued the discomfited suitor; hereafter I intend to be extra polite to all the old women with umbrellas and camphor bottles, when I ride in stage coaches. I find it a paying business.

The Name of the Deity.

A Hint at the Bakers.

A half-finished fellow in the Southern States tells of a baker (whose loaves had been growing smaller by degrees and beautifully less,) who, when going his rounds to serve his customers, stopped at the door of one and knocked, when the lady within exclaimed—who's there? and was answered: The baker. What do you want?—To leave your bread. Well you needn't make such a fuss about it—put it through the keyhole!

The Electoral Vote of 1864.

Under the present apportionment the following is the electoral vote of the several States which will participate in the coming Presidential election:

TOTAL STATES.
California,	5
Connecticut,	6
Delaware,	3
Illinois,	16
Indiana,	13
Iowa,	8
Kansas,	3
Kentucky,	11
Maine,	7
Maryland,	7
Massachusetts,	12
Michigan,	8
Minnesota,	4
Missouri,	11
New Hampshire,	5
New Jersey,	7
New York,	33
Ohio,	21
Oregon,	3
Pennsylvania,	26
Rhode Island,	4
Vermont,	5
West Virginia,	5
Wisconsin,	8
Total	231

STATES PROBABLY VOTING.

Arkansas,	5
Colorado,	3
Louisiana,	7
Nebraska,	3
Nevada,	3
Tennessee,	10
Virginia (part),	5
Total	36

The following States now in rebellion would have been entitled to fifty-four electoral votes:

Alabama,	6
Florida,	5
Georgia,	9
Mississippi,	7
North Carolina,	9
South Carolina,	6
Texas,	6
Virginia (part),	6
Total	61

In the event of a vote of all these States, the whole number of electoral votes would have been 321, making necessary to a choice of President and Vice President, 161. If we omit the votes of the States and districts in rebellion, and include those which will enter the Union, or will have returned to allegiance, the whole number of votes will be 267, of which 134 will be sufficient to elect.—N. Y. Evening Post.

Barnum's Advertising Experience.

The American Museum I bought twenty-five years ago, because the owner had died, he having made a fortune, because there was no other museum there. He had been dead two years. His daughter did not advertise. It was losing money. People would look at the sign, "American Museum;" call it in every country and clime of the earth, the most useful animals are those that eat vegetable food. The all powerful elephant, the patient, untiring camel, in the torrid zone; the horse, the ox, or the donkey, in the temperate; and the reindeer in the frigid zone, obtain all their muscular power from Nature's simplest productions—the vegetable kingdom. But all the flesh-eating animals keep the rest of the animated creation in constant dread of them. They seldom eat vegetable food unless some other animal has eaten it first, and made it into flesh. Their own flesh is unfit for other animals to eat, having been used made out of flesh, and is most foul and offensive. Great strength, fleetness of foot, usefulness, cleanliness, and docility, are then, always characteristic of vegetable eaters.

It is indeed a fact worthy of remark, and one that never seems to have been noticed, that throughout the whole animal creation, in every country and clime of the earth, the most useful animals are those that eat vegetable food. The all powerful elephant, the patient, untiring camel, in the torrid zone; the horse, the ox, or the donkey, in the temperate; and the reindeer in the frigid zone, obtain all their muscular power from Nature's simplest productions—the vegetable kingdom. But all the flesh-eating animals keep the rest of the animated creation in constant dread of them. They seldom eat vegetable food unless some other animal has eaten it first, and made it into flesh. Their own flesh is unfit for other animals to eat, having been used made out of flesh, and is most foul and offensive. Great strength, fleetness of foot, usefulness, cleanliness, and docility, are then, always characteristic of vegetable eaters.

"Born to no Master, no Sect are we."

SAD ACCIDENT. We learn that a man in the employ of Mr. Brigham, of Dorchester, got badly injured one day the present week while carting ice from this town to the former place. When near the President's bridge the horses became unmanageable, and ran violently down the hill towards Mr. Peter Butler's and when nearly opposite his residence, completely overturned the load.

Mr. Charles N. Ditson, of this town, kindly carried the injured man to his residence at Neponset.

FIRE. An old barn containing a number of tons of hay, belonging to Jos. W. Robertson of this town, was destroyed by fire on the 20th inst. A small frame building belonging to Mr. Jonathan Jameson, of this place, was burnt on Saturday evening. The above fires are supposed to be the work of incendiaries.

SUDDEN DEATH. On Saturday last, Mr. John McNairy, long a resident of this town, dropped dead of heart disease, at the ledge where he was at work. He was an affectionate husband and kind father, and his loss will be deeply felt by his family.

APPOINTMENT. Eben. W. Underwood, has received the appointment of enrolling officer for this town, and entered on his duties on Monday last.

DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION. The Democrats of the Second Congressional District, met in convention at the Town Hall, in this town, on Thursday last, for the purpose of choosing two delegates to the Chicago Convention. The Convention was called to order, and Dr. Wm. S. Pattee, of this town, was chosen President.

On motion of Mr. Pratt, of Braintree, a committee of five on credentials was appointed. They subsequently reported the number of towns represented, 12; delegates, 72.

The committee on resolutions reported the following:

RESOLVED,—That we, the Democracy of the Second District in Conference assembled do hereby ratify and confirm the principles to which we have ever adhered, and which principles, under the rule of Democracy, have ever maintained the rights of every individual. Free speech, a free press, a maintenance of the Union and Constitution of our country, and under which we have ever prospered.

On motion of Mr. Pratt, Hon. Caleb Stetson of Braintree, and James Maguire of Randolph, were nominated delegates by acclamation.

BOSTON ANNIVERSARIES. Never were there more crowded or enthusiastic audiences than those which gathered the past week. Those of the Sunday School Societies with their great choirs of children, the Christian Commission and the Jubilee of the American Tract Society were of surpassing interest. The country was the engrossing theme, and loyal, patriotic sentiments everywhere received with the warmest applause.

THE GREAT ORGAN. Many strangers enjoyed a free exhibition of this colossal instrument during Anniversary week. B. J. Lang played at the Tract Society meeting, and L. S. Frohock at the Seamen's Friend Society.

A very large limb from one of the beautiful elm trees in front of Dr. French's residence in this town, was blown down one day the present week.

ANOTHER DRAFT. The Secretary of War has declared that it is the design of the Government to keep up the National forces until the rebellion is overthrown, and in order to provide against any inopportune reduction when the service of the hundred days' men goes out, a draft to fill their places and all other reductions will be ordered to take place on the 1st of July, by which time the new enrolments will be completed. No order is yet issued.

CAUTION TO TAX-PAYERS. The Legislature has passed a law which provides that any inhabitant of this Commonwealth who shall escape taxation, by wilfully and designedly changing or concealing his residence, or by any other act, with intent so to escape, shall be liable, upon conviction therefor, to pay a fine of twice the amount of the last tax paid by such person; or if he shall have paid no tax in this Commonwealth, a fine of not less than one hundred, nor more than five thousand dollars.

THE LAW ON EXEMPTS. The law calling out the military force of the country, says: "Any physician or surgeon, who shall directly or indirectly, demand or receive any compensation for furnishing certificates of disability, shall be deemed guilty of high misdemeanor; and, upon conviction, shall, for every such offence, be fined not exceeding five hundred dollars, and shall also be subjected to imprisonment for a term not exceeding one year."

AN OPENING FOR BUSINESS. The Granular Fuel Establishment, with all the machinery for manufacturing the same, is offered for sale. See advertisement.

Information Wanted.

Bermuda Hundred, May 19, 1864.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

Having noticed in your paper of April 23d, that the Selectmen have been authorized to pay to all recruits the sum of one hundred and twenty-five dollars, I would like to know if it includes the men that re-enlisted in January of 1864.

VETERAN.

TO THE POINT. A contemporary after noticing the coolness of some individuals in asking printers to publish long and prosy resolutions, obituary notices, advertisements of benevolent enterprises, &c., without offering or expecting to pay any thing therefor, says: "Until we find teachers who teach gratis; butchers who furnish steaks and roasts without charge; lawyers who counsel without fees; farmers who donate their wood and produce, &c., we must decline being in the list of printers who print without compensation."

A PROPHECY. Andrew Jackson Davis, the Spiritualist physician, seer, prophet, what-not, announces, as important intelligence recently received, that after about six more battles, two of them to be desperate and bloody ones, peace will be declared. This is to be before the next harvest is gathered. Gold is to take the downward track in May and July. After about ten years of peace and prosperity, wars with France and England are probable. We hope Andrew is right, especially in the first part of his prediction.

BRING OUT THE RAGS. They are scarce and high now, the paper makers say, and so they put up their prices terribly—higher than ever before, with a single exception. The good housekeeper will consult her own interest, and that of publishers also, by hunting up and selling all their paper rags.

BOOTS AND SHOES. We recommend the patronage of those looking for a tasty fitting Boot or Shoe, to Curtis's Central shoe store, where may be found all the latest Boston and other desirable styles, to be found in any first class shoe store, and at the very lowest cash prices.

A VERY CURIOUS BOOK has been published by Trubner, the well-known English publisher, on "the current gold and silver coins of all countries," with nine hundred fac-simile illustrations in silver and gilt. Among the curious facts which it brings out is the one that the Austrian dollar coined at the present day is the exact copy of the dollar of Maria Theresa, of 1780, then struck for the Levant trade.

HEAVY LICENSE. A dry goods firm on Devonshire street, Boston, paid recently, a license of seventeen thousand dollars, the sum required of a firm selling between six and seven millions of dollars' worth of goods per annum.

CARELESSNESS. A Rochester boy playfully aimed a gun at his mother, and snapped the lock. It chanced to be loaded, and the mother was shot dead.

We have heard of several small boys who are in the habit of carrying fire arms about with them; and we think if their parents do not look after them, they may have occasion to shed bitter tears over their carelessness.

LIEUTENANT GENERALS. There have been three Lieutenant Generals in the United States service: George Washington, who was thus appointed in 1798; Winfield Scott, (now on the retired list,) confirmed under a special act of Congress in November, 1861, and Ulysses S. Grant, appointed under an act of Congress, approved by the President on the 26th of February. The present appointment was but forty-two years old on the twenty-seventh of this month.

POTATOES. A paper has been addressed to the Agricultural Society of Chelone, in which it is stated that potatoes may be safely grown free from disease by merely planting them in June instead of April. The writer, who has proved his theory by several years of successful experiment, is of opinion that the residents of the roots in April they become corrupted by the alternate frost and heat.

THE LADIES' FRIEND. The June number of this handsome monthly opens with a fine steel engraving of "The Young Blood." This is followed by a handsome colored Fashion Plate, double the size of those usually given by two-dollar magazines. Then come a number of well executed wood engravings of the fashions, needle-work, &c., such as ladies alone know how to properly value. A number of engravings illustrating "Archery for Ladies" is an interesting feature of this number.

Among the literary articles we note the "Marriage of Convenience," "The Heroes of Neithorpe" (illustrated), "Mabel's Mission," "Shadow and Sunshine," "Margaret's Cross," "Richard Graham's Love," &c. &c. The "Transformed Village" (illustrated), &c. &c. Altogether this is a very interesting number. Price $2.00 a year, (back numbers furnished); 20 cents a single number.

Published by DEACON & PETERSON, 319 Walnut St. Philadelphia.

THE NEXT CALL for men, it is said, will be for two hundred thousand.

OIL. Whale oil sells in New Bedford for one dollar and fifteen cents per gallon.

NO RESPECT FOR JUDGES. Hon. George White of this town, Judge of Probate and Insolvency for this County, and Hon. E. H. Bennett, Judge of Probate and Insolvency of Bristol County, were both drafted at Taunton last week.

A SUBSTITUTE. A Maine paper says, "People are getting into the habit of using syrups as a substitute for butter." It is found easier to contract such a habit than to form the habit of paying fifty cents a pound for butter. Many of the boarding houses find it impossible to procure butter. One of the grocers sent a runner one hundred miles into the country for butter, and succeeded only in obtaining one tub."

LADIES' LEAGUE SOCIETY. A Boston paper suggests the organization of "a grand Loyal Ladies' League, composed of women who are willing to pledge themselves to maintain, while this war lasts, a decent economy in their attire." In connection with this, it is interesting to know that the Merrimack Print Works are about to resume operations, so that calicos will once more be cheaper than delaines. These print-works have been closed nearly two years.

Summary of Intelligence.

The Supreme Court of Massachusetts has decided that a will made on the Lord's Day is legal, it not being a matter of contract.

Massachusetts men residing in Washington are taking steps for the organization of a State political club, which will unite with those already formed by citizens of other States, in erecting a large wing and in distributing campaign documents.

We are glad to notice that, while every thing else is going up, one thing is coming down, and that is the size of the ladies' hoops.

It is estimated that in the recent battles we have expended nearly two million rounds of Infantry ammunition, and about fifteen thousand rounds of Artillery ammunition.

It is a fact not perhaps generally known, that Washington drew his breath in the last hour in the last day of the last week, in the last month of the year, and in the last year of the century. Saturday night, twelve o'clock, December 31, 1799.

Switzerland, already so rich in beautiful scenery, has had a new feature added to its wonders of Nature. Near St. Maurice, in the Canton de Vaud, a grand crystal cavern has been discovered, at which one arrives by a boat on a subterranean lake. The cavern has four hundred metres, or thirteen hundred feet below the surface of the earth, and is said to be beautiful beyond description.

The iron mountain in Missouri is exactly in the geographical centre of the United States. It is almost a solid mass of specular iron ore, rising from a level two hundred and sixty feet. Its base covers five hundred acres. The ore contains sixty-seven per cent. of iron.

U. S. 10-40 BONDS.

These Bonds are issued under the Act of Congress of March 3d, 1864, which provides that all Bonds issued under this Act shall be EXEMPT FROM TAXATION by or under any state or municipal authority. Subscriptions to these Bonds are received in United States notes or notes of National Banks. They are TO BE REDEEMED IN COIN, at the pleasure of the Government, at any period not less than ten nor more than forty years from their date, and until their redemption FIVE PER CENT. INTEREST WILL BE PAID IN COIN, on Bonds of not over one hundred dollars annually and on all other Bonds semi-annually. The interest is payable on the first days of March and September in each year.

Subscribers will receive either Registered or Coupon Bonds, as they may prefer. Registered Bonds are recorded on the books of the U. S. Treasurer, and can be transferred only on the owner's order. Coupon Bonds are payable to bearer, and are more convenient for commercial uses.

Subscribers to this loan will have the option of having their Bonds draw interest from March 1st, by paying the accrued interest in coin—for in United States notes, or the notes of National Banks, adding fifty per cent. (premium) or receive their drawing interest from the date of subscription and deposit. As these Bonds are their value is increased from one to three per cent. per annum, according to the rate of tax levies in various parts of the country.

At the present rate of premium on gold they pay

Over Eight per cent. Interest

in currency, and are of equal convenience as a permanent or temporary investment.

It is believed that no securities offer so great inducements to lenders as the various descriptions of U. S. Bonds. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties or stock companies or separate communities only is pledged for payment, while for the debts of the United States the whole property of the country is held to secure the payment of both principal and interest in coin.

These Bonds may be subscribed for in sums from $50 up to any magnitude, on these terms, and are thus made equally available to the smallest lender and the largest capitalist. They can be converted into money at any moment, and the holder will have the benefit of the interest.

It may be useful to state in this connection that the total Funded Debt of the United States on which interest is payable in gold, on the 31 day of March, 1864, was $768,965,000. The interest on this debt for the coming fiscal year will be $45,937,126, while the customs revenue in gold for the current fiscal year, ending June 30th, 1864, has been so far at the rate of over $100,000,000 per annum.

It will be seen that even the present gold revenues of the Government are largely in excess of the wants of the Treasury for the payment of gold interest, while the recent increase of the tariff will doubtless raise the annual receipts from customs on the same amount of importations, to $150,000,000 per annum.

Instructions to the National Banks acting as loan agents were not issued from the United States Treasury until March 26, but in the first three weeks of April the subscriptions averaged more than TEN MILLIONS A WEEK.

Subscriptions will be received by the

The Superfluous Man.
BY JOHN G. SAXE.

It is ascertained by inspection of the registers of many countries, that the uniform proportion of male to female births is as 21 to 20: accordingly in respect to marriage every 21st man is naturally superfluous. — [Smith's Treatise on Population.]

I long have been puzzled to guess,
And so I have frequently said,
What the reason could really be,
That I never have happened to wed;
But now it is perfectly clear
I am under a natural ban;
The girls are already assigned—
And I'm a superfluous man!

Those clever statistical chaps
Declare the numerical ratio
Of women and men in the world,
Is twenty to twenty-and-one;
And hence in the pairing, you see,
Since wooing and wedding began,
For every consensual score,
They've got a superfluous man!

By twenties and twenties they go,
And giddily rush to their fate,
For none of the number, of course,
Can fall of a conjugal mate;
But while they're yielding in scores
To Nature's inflexible plan,
There's never a woman for me,—
For I'm a superfluous man!

It isn't that I am a clown,
To soothe over inclined;
It isn't that I am at fault
In morals or manners or mind;
Then what is the reason, you ask,
I am still with the bachelor clan?
I merely was numbered amies,—
And I am a superfluous man!

It isn't that I am in want
Of personal beauty or grace,
For many a man with a wife
Is uglier far in the face;
Indeed, among elegant men
I fancy myself in the van,
But what is the value of that,
When I'm a superfluous man!

Although I am fond of the girls,
For ought I could ever discern,
The tender emotion I feel
Is one that they never return;
'Tis idle to quarrel with fate,
For, struggle as hard as I can,
They're mated already, you know,—
And I'm a superfluous man!

No wonder I grumble at times,
With women so pretty and plenty,
To know that I never was born
To figure as one of the twenty;
But yet, when the average lot
With critical vision I scan,
I think it may be for the best
That I'm a superfluous man!

A Name.

Make to thyself a name,
Not with a breath of clay,
Which, like the broken, hollow reed,
Dut hide itself away;
Not with the fame that vaunts
The tyrant on his throne,
And hurls its stigma on the soul
That God vouchsafes to own.

Make to thyself a name,
Not such as wealth can weave,
Whose warp is but a thread of gold
That dazzles to deceive;
Not with the tints of love,
That scroll within thy hand shall fade,
Like him who placed it there.

Make to thyself a name,
Not in the sculptured stone—
The marble oft betrays its trust,
Like Egypt's lofty pile;
But ask of him who quell'd
Of death, the victor-strife,
To write it on the blood-bought page
Of everlasting life.

Anecdotes.

The head of a turtle, for several days after its separation from the body, remains and exhibits life and sensation. An Irishman had decapitated one, and some days afterwards was amusing himself by putting sticks in his mouth which it bit with violence. A lady who saw the proceeding, exclaimed:
Why, Patrick, I thought the turtle was dead.
So he is, ma'am, but the crawler's not sensible of it!

Pa, what is fi-cation?
There is no such word as fi-cation, my son says the father; what do you ask that for?
Why Pa, Mr. Balger says that the French have been building forty fictions in Mexico. Charles, says the father, you had better run home, you are too young to understand war matters.

A gentleman who had been in the habit of presiding at a Sunday School celebration not long since, being a little inclined to put on airs, informed the audience, in a rather ostentatious manner, that they would now have some vocal music on the brass band.

Hallo, Frank, I thought you was dead?
Oh, said Frank, they did get a story around that I was dead, but it was another man. I knew it wasn't me as soon as I heard of it!

Secret Prayer.

There is a power above all earthly power,—
The power of secret prayer!

The soul's relief in sorrow's darkest hour,
Its refuge from despair.

Oh! what a boon, to steal away alone,
When Earth no help can bring,
And offer our petitions at the throne
Of the eternal King.

Who listens graciously to our appeals,
Who all our anguish knows,
And more than any temporal father feels Compassion for our woes.

To whom our prayer no studied language needs,
No form, no chill and dead;
Who listens to the contrite heart that pleads,
When not a word is said.

Who makes his face to shine—who fills the mind
With hope and calm delight,
And in whom all who put their trust shall find Life's hardest trouble light.

Scraps.

TO CLEANSE RIBBONS. One table spoonful of brandy; one table spoonful of soft soap; one table spoonful of molasses.

Directions: Take a clean, stiff tooth brush; lay the ribbons on a clean board; dip the tooth brush in the mixture; rub the ribbons front and back, with the brush; then, when you think they are clean, rinse them in soft water; then pass them over the cloth, and iron them as soon as possible. L. O. O.

The above receipt has been tried in a friend's family, and is pronounced excellent.

Wealth is not acquired, as many persons supposed, by fortunate speculations and splendid enterprises, but by the daily practice of industry, frugality and economy. He who relies upon these means will rarely be found destitute, and who ever relies upon any other will generally become bankrupt.

Sin has a great many tools, but a lie is a handle that fits them all.

A secret worth knowing—Lawyers rarely go to law, and doctors seldom take medicine.

Many of the supposed increasers of knowledge have only given a new name, and often a worse, to what was well known before.

"Sonny, does your father take a paper?"

Yes, sir, two of them. One of them belongs to Mr. Smith, the other to Mr. Thompson. I books them both off the stoop.

Well! my boy, do you know what syntax means? said a schoolmaster to the child of a teetotaler. Yes, sir, the duty upon spirits.

The only sure thing to make you happy is to get married and pay the printer. Try it, especially the latter.

Got any "tin?" will be the correct inquiry. The new cent will be composed of 95 per cent. copper and 5 per cent. tin.

Miscellaneous.

One of Many.

John Gaston, private, killed.

It was a short record; only a line in long columns of other lines; but to a home in the New Hampshire hills it came with a power of great despair, making all of life dreary and sad.

It was a right pleasant home, with all beautiful surroundings, to which that August day, this brief announcement brought grief and desolation; a home made luminous by love, musical by the prattle of sweet-tongued children, holy by the voice of daily prayer—a home where bright eyes looked lovingly into life's depths of joy and hope, and brave hands performed with cheerful industry life's daily work. Vines clung tenderly around the low windows; flowers—scarlet, pink and gold—fringed the pleasant walks; and all day long, from the poplars at the door, birds sang their joyous airs in the drowsy ear of summer-dreaming amidst the glories.

But it was dark now; there were shadows on the faces which had been bright all summer through, and there were sobs and sad plaints waiting through the prayers of the stricken mother of the fold, kneeling with the wondering ones around her.

I am dying, comrade. The voice was faint, and had a moan in it. I am dying; put your hand here on my heart. See! it has almost ceased to beat. Dying, dying!

Over the hills and along the valley the battle rolled with noisy grandeur. Through the thick smoke great flashes of flame burst now and then like sudden sunbursts. But the ear of the soldier, lying there on the edge of the flaming field, was closed to the battle's tumult. In his ears softer voices were breathing; on his eyes a sweeter than battle glory was shining—shining from far-off New Hampshire hills, where the son was lying like a benediction.

Lift me up a little, the weak voice said; so—and the pale face brightened for a moment with an expression of relief. Then—I have a home, comrade, in dear New Hampshire, and a wife and three little ones are waiting for me there. I had hoped to go to them in a little while—my time would have been out in September. I have dreamed many a night, lying under the stars, of walking up the village street, and finding Tom, and Kate, and Susie, waiting for me at the gate; their little faces all aflame with joy. Sometimes I have seemed to hear them praying for me, comrade, praying with their little hands folded on their mother's knees; and the dark hours have all been made bright by that thought, the sight of that picture lying in my heart. But all that is over now. I shall never sit again in my great arm chair at the table's head, nor lie with my children round me on the grass plot, nor under the poplars at the door.

A spasm checked his speech for a moment. His heart was bleeding as well as the wound in his side. Presently, as if God were holding up to him the past, he went on dreamily: I remember well, comrade, the day when Jennie and I were married. It was in the old church on the village green; you will see it if you go there, with a graveyard full of weather-beaten tombstones behind it; June was blowing her sweet breath in at the windows, filling all the place with a delicious balmy; friends and neighbors stood around the white haired old minister—he had christened us both when it was yet summer with him—with a happy face knit us together; and then with a benediction resting upon our heads—I remember it as if but yesterday—we walked homeward. O, how joyously, along the narrow by-path, under the apple trees, whose boughs seemed to whisper blessings on us as we went. Then, I remember, I took Jenny to my own little home, just on the village border, and we began life's work together; summer in our hearts; summer overhead, summer under our feet. Then, after a while, comrade, a boy came to us—a boy with his mother's eyes; and a new song was put into our mouths. How like a vineyard purpling with luscious fruits, life seemed to us then! How we watched and loved our boy! How our hearts opened to receive his sisters when they came, seeming to know he was yearning for playmates! We used to think, Jenny and I, as we looked into the faces of our darlings, that God must have missed three of His brightest ones after these, our babes, had wandered down to our home.

The soldier paused again; tears on his cheek, his voice tremulous. Then, put your arm under me, comrade, he said, I will soon be done. Our little ones grew up around us; we had to work harder, for their sakes, than before; but content lightened all our toil; we would have given our lives for them. If you have a flock at home, comrade, you know what feeling was. Well, we were happy, never dreaming of going apart, when suddenly—you remember it—the old flag was assailed, and a cry came for help, for men to defend the life of the nation. My grandfather, comrade, was with Washington at Trenton and Yorktown; I have at home a sword, he wore in those old days, and my blood leaped at that call. But for a day, a week, I resisted my own heart; I could not go, I thought, and leave my home, my wife, my little ones, so dear, so more than precious. But then, what is home worth without a flag to cover it? What would become of my dear ones if chaos came? If we could not walk the streets, and lie down at night, with the confidence, the consolation, that we had a country, a government, a law stronger than any mob, greater than the maddest fury of rebellion? I could not hold out against these thoughts, comrade; so at last I told Jenny all that was in my heart; and she, God bless her, brave soul! said, firmly, but with tears: Go, John—the Father will care for us; the country needs you; go! And so, comrade, bid them bear up; tell Jenny to teach my boy never to despair of the Republic; never to be false to it for one hour; never to strike hands with any man who has faltered now. And bark, comrade, tell her to kiss my darlings night and morning for me; I shall see her, and think, maybe, my lips are pressing theirs from the celestial Lookout my feet are climbing now.

A cheer from the hill where the battle raged fluttered down the slope to the soldier dying.

Victory! the pale lips cried; the weak hands clutched for the ground; the feet were nervous a moment as if he would once more stand erect and salute the flag, victorious now; then a deeper shadow fell on the face; the voice murmured, comrade, remember! the limbs grew rigid—and John Gaston, private, was dead.

And the shadow that only the eye of Faith can penetrate and find clear sky beyond was lying on the home among the Granite Hills. They buried him on the field, and there, these spring days, whose warmth is wooing all Nature into blossom and fragrance, soft sunshine over his ashes; and the summer, when it comes, will fold over his stilled heart the same robe of emerald and gold that kings lie under through God's going years.

There are hearts, indeed, that miss him; but their sorrow is not without consolation. He tell for his country—fell in the place where duty put him; and that thought sweetened the cup, and may help them at last to find the pearl of perfect peace at the bottom.

So, noble ravages go on. So, on scores of fields, noble lives, full of sublime impulses, come to a glorious pause, saluting the Great Captain with a smile as they pass to the last review. Who remain at ease in our homes, with only the murmurs of the distant conflict breaking on our ears, know little of the heroism, the sublime martyrdom, the sweet faith and resignation which illustrates every battle field, and brighten hospital and camp all along the path of strife; know little what sons of hope go down forever in the smoke of bloody fields; what ties are rent never to be knit again; what histories full of noble daring are ended in one flash and cannon peal.

But should we not remember and think of all this, and so be juster than we are to those who, all unsuspected in peaceful times of carrying under their homely garbs souls with the robust strength and faith of the martyr in them, are giving to-day on every field such exhibitions of the depth and influence of our national character and aspirations as shall make all coming time bright with the glory of this?

Pat's Idea of Stock.

Pat Donahue was a "broth of a boy," right from the "Gn of the Say," and he had a small contract on the Conway Railroad, in New Hampshire, in the year of grace, 1855, which he agreed to take his pay part in cash, part in bonds, and part in stock. The stock of this road, he it remembered—like many others—was not worth a "Continental," and has always kept up its value with remarkable uniformity. In due time Pat, having completed his job, presented himself at the treasurer's office for settlement. The money, the bonds, and the certificate of stock were soon in his possession.

"And what is this now?" said Pat, flourishing his certificate of stock, bearing the "broad seal" of the corporation.

"That is your stock, sir," blandly replied the treasurer.

"And is this what I'm to get for me labor? Wasn't me contract for stock?"

Why, certainly; that is your stock.—What did you expect?

What did I expect? said Pat, excitedly; "what did I expect? Why pigs, and sheep, and horses, shure!"

To the Publisher of the Patriot:

Having a few minutes to spare, I thought best to improve it by giving you a slight detail of our travels and exploits in this campaign thus far:

May 4. We received orders to have three days' rations and be ready to embark. Rations given out, the boys laid on their oars until 3 in the afternoon, when we marched to the wharf and were stowed on board a transport, with the 100th New York Reg., the same as you would stow pigs. We then dropped out into the stream and anchored.</

THE QUINCY PATRIOT.

Saturday, June 4th, 1864.

"Born to no Master, of no Sect are we."

DEATHS OF QUINCY SOLDIERS. Nosh L. Cummings, son of Josiah Cummings, of Company E, 20th Mass. Regiment, died from wounds received in the late battles. His body arrived in this town on Tuesday evening last.

JAMES HUGHES, of Captain Spear's Co., 39th Mass. Regiment, died on the 13th ult., of wounds received in the Wilderness battle on the 10th, aged forty-two years and eleven months.

THE LATE DRAFT. Of the sixteen persons recently drafted from this town, twelve were examined at Taunton on Tuesday last, with the following result:

ACCEPTED:
Wm. G. Prescott, John D. Wells, Adams Whitney, Charles H. Brown, Thomas P. Owens, Albert B. Spear, Chase Parker.

EXEMPTED:
Frederick Hardwick, James H. Cunningham, George White, George L. Baxter, 21, William Johnson.

NOT REPORTED:
George Thayer, Michael Cronin, Thomas Shortland, Vernon Smith.

ICE CREAM SALOON. Friend Carver, it will be perceived by his card, with the "milk of human kindness," and the cream of one of our best dairies, will regale our citizens, during the present season, with his delicious creams. He has taken the pleasant and central location, known as the Nightingale shop, on Temple street, and fitted it up in the best style for the reception of visitors. We were wondering what our people would do for a connoisseur in such matters, when Mr. C. came forward, and we congratulate the community on his resolution. Let the world see as it may outside, don't forget to cultivate the social comforts, by an early acquaintance with the proprietor of the Temple street Saloon.

PHOTOGRAPHS. We would call the attention of our readers in this town and vicinity, to the advertisement of L. W. Cooke, in another column. A good photograph is something which has become indispensable as a possession in our day. We know of no place where this article can be more surely supplied, than at the rooms of Mr. Cooke, at Weymouth Landing. Aside from any facilities which his extensive apparatus furnishes, he possesses the art of so arranging his sitters as to give them a graceful attitude, free from awkwardness or constraint of manner such as is too often seen in the pictures of those who sit to less practiced and careful artists. The difference between a spirited, life-like picture, and a mere transcript of perhaps the worst expression of features, frequently rests on this point.

PLANTS. We would call the attention of those wishing for cabbage or tobacco plants, to the advertisement of Mr. Joshua Spear, in another column.

ROBBERY. We learn that some clothing belonging to children, was stolen from the entry of the Adams School in this town, on Thursday last.

BOGUS PROCLAMATIONS. The late forged Proclamation was not the first thing of the kind that has startled a nation. During the war of 1814, between England and France, several English speculators concocted a letter purporting to be signed by an aid-de-camp of Lord Cathcart, announcing a defeat of the French by the allies, and the slaying of Napoleon by a party of Cossacks. The news was believed, the funds took an upward start, and the forgers reaped a golden harvest. The speculators, who comprised Charles Ransom de Beranger, Sir Thomas Cochrane, Andrew Cochrane, Johnstone, Richard Gathorne Butt, Ralph Sandom, Alexander McRae, John Peter Holloway, and Henry Lyte, were arrested and tried on the charge of conspiracy against the public welfare. All were convicted. Cochrane and Butt were fined £1000 each; Holloway £500. All were sentenced to one year's imprisonment, and Beranger, Cochrane, and Butt, in addition, put in the pillory opposite the London Exchange for one hour. In this case, the forgers proclaimed a victory for their country, while Howard, the New York speculator, announced a great disaster, and was therefore guilty of a much greater crime against the public welfare.

QUEST. What has become of your old and valuable Boston Correspondence? We have missed it from your columns for some weeks.

CHALLENGE COFFEE. As a substitute for the pure article, we believe it is generally conceded, that in point of flavor as well as in many other excellent qualities, the challenge coffee stands without a rival. It has often challenged our discriminating powers to determine whether we were really imbibing a cup of old Java, or only an imitation. Newhall, South Market street, Boston, is the manufacturer. See advertisement.

Correspondence of the Patriot.

SCHOOL SHIP, BOSTON HARBOR.
MAY 30TH, 1864.

The charming weather of to-day, and the pleasant recollections of other days spent aboard the old "Massachusetts," led us to accept the polite invitation of her Commander this morning to visit the School. The ship we find has been thoroughly overhauled since our last cruise in her. Still greater changes have taken place in the School. There are one hundred and forty boys on board, half of whom fill the school room, while the others are busy about ship. We have been listening to the recitations in history and practical navigation; looking over their specimens of penmanship and hearing their songs. They sing as though they were not in the least troubled with phthisis, or any other physical ailment. Indeed, we know it to be a fact that a physician is almost never called.

The moral influence as well as the physical and mental training we believe to be in the highest degree beneficial. Our citizens may well be proud of this nautical branch of our reformatory institutions. We designed to say more, but the Captain's barge is waiting.

Yours, E. F. T.

OVER FIFTY MILLIONS. The amount of subscriptions to the 10-40 Loan reported at the Treasury Department up to Saturday, the 21st ult., was $54,564,400. The subscriptions have averaged about a million dollars a day since the loan was first offered.

ENTRIES UNDER THE HOMESTEAD ACT. It is stated that over fifteen thousand seven hundred acres of land were taken up under the Homestead Law during the month of March at the Land-office in St. Peter's, Minnesota. Upward of nineteen thousand acres were entered in the same month at the Winnebago City office in the same State.

We learn that a discourse will be preached at the Orthodox church, Hancock street, to-morrow afternoon, in memory of George Wyman, late of the 39th Mass., who fell in the recent advance on Richmond.

THE GOOD SAMARITANS. At the wharves in Washington, when the wounded are arriving, a detachment of the Sanitary Commission is stationed, who watch with telescopes for the coming boats. When a steamer with the wounded is descried in the distance, the Samaritans go at once to preparing huge cans of coffee, iced lemonade, sandwiches, &c., and when the boat reaches the wharf the hunger and thirst of the sufferers are immediately assuaged.

THE FRANKING PRIVILEGE. It will be seen by the following Act approved March 10th, that persons having occasion to address the President or Vice President by mail can do so gratuitously:

"Be it enacted, &c., That the franking privilege of the President and Vice President of the United States, shall extend to and cover all mail matter sent from, or directed to, either of them."

ON DIET. A prominent physician says: "In my practice I have noticed that those children who become ill and die in the spring and summer have fallen victims to the thoughtlessness of parents, who stuff them with roast and fresh meat at a season when their stomachs require a vegetable diet, easily digested and equally nutritious. I have saved the lives of more children by recommending farinaceous and vegetable food than I ever did by dosing them with disagreeable medicines."

A NEW LAW. By an act which has passed the House of Representatives, and will probably pass the Senate, persons manufacturing or circulating gold, or any other "token" bearing a resemblance to the coins of the United States, will subject themselves to a fine of three thousand dollars and five years' imprisonment. This is aimed at the private mints of the gold region, and at the manufacturers of cent tokens.

WEIGHT OF REVOLUTIONARY OFFICERS. In the Salem Gazette of August 19, 1783, the weights of the principal American Revolutionary Commanders were given, as weighed in the scales of West Point; the following is a list as there published:

"General Washington, 209 pounds; General Lincoln, 224; General Knox, 280; General Huntington, 132; General Greason, 166; Colonel Swift, 219; Colonel Michael Jackson, 252; Colonel Henry Jackson, 238; Lieutenant Huntington, 232; Lieutenant Colonel Cobb, 182; Lieutenant Colonel Humphreys, 221."

The average, two hundred and fourteen pounds, may be considered high."

MAT-TA-PO NY. The four rivers in Virginia, Mat, Ta, Po, and Ny, which have gained a place in history by the battles of the 9th and 10th ultimo, fought on their banks, are four branches into which the Mattaponi separates itself just below the line of Spotylvania country.

POST OFFICE. The Post Office Committee of the House have reported a bill amendatory of the Postal laws, among other things giving Postmasters regular salaries instead of commissions; requiring all receipts for box rents, &c., to be accounted for, and authorizing sales of stamps in quantities not less than one hundred dollars at a per cent. than five per cent. discount.

Summary of Intelligence.

ORIGINAL AND SELECTED.

Mrs. Ichabod Wing, who recently died of dropsy at East Weymouth, had been tapped ninety-five times since June, 1855. The total amount of the water taken from her at all of these operations was 2365 quarts or 18 1/2 barrels, weighing 4736 pounds.

It is encouraging in these days of "Five Twenties" and "Ten Forties," to be reminded that a debt of $127,000,000 owed by our population of only eight millions and a half, in 1816, was totally extinguished in eighteen years.

The Watch Company at Waltham, Mass., is now turning out a watch in every four minutes, or one hundred and fifty per day.

There is every reason to believe that the crop of hay this year will be the largest ever cut in Maine.

There is a family residing at Fairfield, consisting of three brothers and three sisters, in which the first death for seventy-five years has recently occurred.

Rev. Alfred P. Putnam, of Roxbury, Mass., has accepted a call to the Church of the Saviour, in Brooklyn (late Rev. Dr. Farley's).

The first of a lot of gunboats for the Japanese navy building in this country was launched at New York recently.

The navy is still engaged in fishing for torpedoes in the James River. Every day more or less are raked up, containing from seventy-five to two thousand pounds of powder.

Cattle are dying suddenly at Woonsocket, and they fear it is pneumonia.

The telegraph wires have been connected through from Portland, Maine, to St. Louis, Missouri, making a circuit of over two thousand miles.

The shoe business of Lynn has been very active this season, the sales averaging one million dollars a month, since the first of January.

The Pennsylvania Legislature has rejected a bill for the removal of the State Capital from Harrisburg to Philadelphia.

Five large strawberries have appeared in the New York market; only a dollar a quart.

Pennsylvania is at present producing nearly 15,000,000 tons of coal annually, and at the present price of coal must be exacting an enormous annual sum.

C. F. Hall, the Arctic explorer, announces his intention of starting upon another expedition about the middle of June. He will leave New London in a whaler, accompanied by Esquimaux.

The Supreme Court of Vermont has declared the soldiers' voting bill of that State unconstitutional, so far as relates to the election of State officers, but constitutional as it relates to the President and members of Congress.

The Providence Press says that the favorable prospect for grass has sensibly affected the hay market, and brought hay down five dollars per ton.

The New Hampshire papers speak of the alarming increase of intemperance in that State. The Manchester American says that the dealer the liquor the more dearly it is loved; the more costly, the poorer and the quicker it will kill, the faster it is swallowed.

Prince Albert, who went to England with an empty purse to marry Victoria, at his death left $5,000,000, which the queen holds for the benefit of her children.

The opinion appears to be gaining ground in Europe that submarine cables should be made of the lightest material. A copper wire with a Manila hemp insulator is now recommended as the lightest and strongest, yet is heavy enough to sink. The Red Sea and Algiers cables are said to have been destroyed by their own weight.

During the last three months sixty pieces of cannon have reached New York for the defence of her harbor.

A Sag Harbor (L. I.) paper says that a sufficient quantity of onion seed has been planted about that village alone to produce seven hundred thousand bushels of that useful esculent.

WORTH VISITING. One of the best places in the city of Boston, to spend an hour pleasantly and profitably, is at the dry goods establishment of Messrs. Cushman & Brooks, Nos. 90 and 92 Tremont street. A large and splendid stock attracts the eye of the visitor on every side. We never selected from a better assortment than that offered us at this establishment a few days since. Ladies visiting the city should not fail to call at this emporium.

NEW ENGLAND FORTIFICATIONS. The fortification bill passed by the House appropriates for the forts at the entrance of the Kennebec River, $150,000; Fort George's Portland, $100,000; Fort Preble, $100,000; Fort Scammel, Portland, $100,000; Fort Constitution, Portsmouth Harbor, $50,000; Fort Warren, Boston, $20,000, for permanent forts at New Bedford, $100,000.

ILLINOIS CORN. In 1860 Illinois raised one hundred and fifteen million bushels of corn. If this were placed in cars, three hundred bushels in a car, it would make a train of two thousand three hundred and ninety-five miles long; and allowing twenty-five cars to a locomotive, it would take fourteen thousand three hundred and seventy locomotives to draw it.

Marriages.

In South Weymouth, on the 31st ult., by Rev. E. Hewitt, Mr. Joshua H. Spear of Quincy to Mrs. Susan S. Delano of East Bridgewater.

Deaths.

In this town on the 30th ult., Mrs. Judith B. wife of Mr. Job Faxon, aged 63 years.

Yes, she has gone, and on whom may her "manly fall"? Many there are beside her own loved family that can rise up and call her blessed. A large circle of acquaintances now mourn her departure,—hers was a life of usefulness and love.

Many a drooping heart has been cheered by her bright presence, and many of God's children less favored with this world's goods have always found in her "a very present help in time of need." Ever did it seem to be her highest aim, to render acts of kindness to those around her, of her it may well be said, she lived not for self alone. And now that she has gone from our midst, and left many a loved one to mourn her absence, may all feel to say, "not my will Lord but thine be done," knowing that "our loss is her gain."

At Campbell Hospital, Washington, (D. C.) private Noah L. Cummings, aged 28 years, funeral Sunday, (to-morrow afternoon,) from the Methodist Episcopal Church, Quincy Point, at 2 1/2 o'clock. Relatives and friends are invited to attend without further notice.

In Brookline on the 30th ult., suddenly, of pneumonia, Mr. William G. Appleton, formerly of this town, aged 73 years and 4 months. His remains were brought here, and the funeral took place on Thursday last, in Hingham, on the 31st ult., Mr. Isaac Little, aged 67 years and 6 months.

In Lynn on the 20th ult., Mrs. Mary, wife of Mr. Charles H. Tolman, eldest daughter of Thomas and Sarah A. Rifferty, formerly of Hingham, aged 30 years, 10 months and 9 days. Her remains were carried to Hingham for interment.

U. S. 10-40 BONDS.

These Bonds are issued under the Act of Congress of March 8th, 1864, which provides that
all Bonds issued under this Act shall be EX-EMPT FROM TAXATION by or under any state or municipal authority. Subscriptions to these Bonds are received in United States notes
or notes of National Banks. They are TO BE REDEEMED IN COIN, at the pleasure of the Government, at any period not less than ten nor more than forty years from their date, and until
their redemption FIVE PER CENT. INTER-EST WILL BE PAID IN COIN, on Bonds of
not over one hundred dollars annually and on all other Bonds semi-annually. The interest is payable on the first days of March and September in each year.

Subscribers will receive either Registered or Coupon Bonds, as they may prefer. Registered
Bonds are recorded on the books of the U. S.
Treasurer, and can be transferred only on the owner's order. Coupon Bonds are payable to bearer, and are more convenient for commercial uses.

Subscribers to this loan will have the option
of having their Bonds draw interest from March 1st, by paying the accrued interest in coin—(or
in United States notes, or the notes of National Banks, adding fifty per cent. for premium,) or receive them drawing interest from the date of subscription and deposit. As these Bonds are

Exempt from Municipal or State Taxation,
their value is increased from one to three per cent. per annum, according to the rate of tax levies in various parts of the country.

At the present rate of premium on gold they pay
Over Eight per cent. Interest
in currency, and are of equal convenience as a permanent or temporary investment.

It is believed that no securities offer so great
inducements to lenders as the various descriptions of U. S. Bonds. In all other forms of indebtedness, the faith or ability of private parties
or stock companies or separate communities only
is pledged for payment, while for the debts of
the United States the whole property of the country is held to secure the payment of both principal and interest in coin.

These Bonds may be subscribed for in sums
from $50 up to any magnitude, on the same terms,
and are thus made equally available to the smallest lender and the largest capitalist. They can be converted into money at any moment, and the holder will have the benefit of the interest.

It may be useful to state in this connection
that the total Funded Debt of the United States
on which interest is payable in gold, on the 31
day of March, 1864, was $768,965,000. The interest on this debt for the coming fiscal year will be $45,937,126, while the customs revenue for the current fiscal year, ending June 30th, 1864, has been so far at the rate of over $100,000,000 per annum.

Poetry.

To Mrs. I. Newcomb.
On the death of her only child.

"NOT LOST, BUT GONE BEFORE."

My home is bright no more, no more.
Its pleasant light has flown;
I sit in darkness, comfortless,
Feeling alone—alone!
Why is it that the dearest ones
Are always first to go?
And why were hearts of mothers made
To love and suffer so?

My child, how can I give thee up?
Oh! the dear, empty days—
The heavy weeks and months and years
My shrinking soul surveys!
How can I bear to journey on My steps no more beguiled,
My weariness no longer cheered
By thy sweet voice, my child!

My Darling, my most precious one,
Did I not always try
To lead thee in the narrow way?
To guide thee faithfully?
I trusted that the Lord would bless
And well reward my care,
That he would make my child his own,
In answer to my prayer;

That he would make my darling grow
In stature and in grace
While I should ask no dearer joy
Than to behold his face—
Oh! Shepherd of the countless Flock
Of Lambs in crowds untold,
Couldst thou not spare my one sweet Lamb
To bless its mother's fold?

Why hast thou made me desolate
Oh! teach my heart to say,
Blessed as He, who gave me joy,
Is He who takes away.
Bind up and heal my broken heart;
Be better, Lord to me
Than anything of human mold,
Or human love can be.

Why should a living soul complain?
All, all have gone astray,
And all thro' suffering and loss
And tears must find the way
Up to the holy City where,
A bright and happy band
Beholding their dear Father's face
The "little children" stand.
No more I murmur, oh! my God, Against thy righteous will—Patient and calm I bide my time—
Peace, peace, my heart be still.

Brooklyn, May 10, 1864.

HOPE.

Hope is like the dawn of the morning
Breaking through the misty night,
Each of Nature's work; adorning
With a pure and holy light;
Like the gentle evening shower,
Scattering fragrance all around,
Opening every little flower
Germinating from the ground.
Let us then forever cherish
Hope, to lift our hearts on high—
For our spirit may not perish,
Or our happy dreaming die;
That, when earthly ties are given,
And we leave this world of care,
We may meet again in heaven,
Each the other's joy to share.

Meeting and Parting.

Meeting and parting, meeting and parting,
That must be while on earth we dwell;
The happy smile, and the quick tear starting,
The welcome clasp and the sad farewell.

But by and by there will come a meeting
Of bliss which no mortal heart could bear;
Where there is no parting to chill the greeting
Of all the beloved that gather there.

Soul, that art sick of the frequent dying,
The deadly anguish of parting pain,
Whiten thy garments and cease thy sighing,
Heaven will restore thee thine own again.

Anecdotes.

Perseverance, said a lady, a friend of ours to her help, is the only way you can accomplish great things. One day eight apple-dumplings were sent down stairs, and they all disappeared.

Sally, where are those dumplings?
I managed to get through them, ma'am.
Why, how on earth did you contrive to eat
so many dumplings?

Persevering, ma'am? answered Sally.

Mother, said James, what is the meaning of donation? You have been preparing all this week for the donation party, and I want to know what it means.

Why, Jimmy, said Johnny, don't you know what donations mean? I do! do means the cake, and nation means the people, and they carry the cake to the minister's, and the people go there and eat it.

Humble as I am, said a bullying spouter,
to a mass meeting of the unlearned, I still remember that I'm a fraction of this magnificent republic.

You are indeed, said a bystander, and a vulgar one at that.

Johnny Reb was looking at one of our guns, remarked that he didn't think that the Yanks would use them big guns much longer.

Why not? inquired one of the Federals.
Because, said he, the Confederacy is getting so narrow that you'll fire clear over it and hit our men on the other side.

The Singer
SEWING MACHINES.

OUR LETTER A Family Sewing Machine

Is fast gaining a world wide reputation.

It is beyond doubt the

BEST AND CHEAPEST

And Most Beautiful of all Family Sewing Machines yet offered to the public. No other Family Sewing Machine has so many useful appliances for Hemming, Binding, Felling, Tucking, Gathering, Gauding, Braiding, Embroidering, Cording, and so forth. No other Family Sewing Machine has so much capacity for a great variety of work. It will sew all kinds of cloth, and with all kinds of thread. Great and recent improvements make our Family Sewing Machine most reliable
and most durable, and most certain in action
at all rates of speed. It makes the interlocked stitch which is the best stitch known.
Any one, even of the most ordinary capacity,
can see at a glance, how to use the Letter A Family Sewing Machine. Our Family Sewing Machines are finished in chaste and exquisite style.

The Folding Case of the Family Machine is a piece of cunning workmanship of the most useful kind. It protects the machine
when not in use, and when about to be operated may be opened as a spacious and substantial table to sustain the work. While some of the Cases, made out of the choicest
woods, are finished in the simplest and chast-
est manner possible, others are adorned and embellished in the most costly and superb
manner.

It is absolutely necessary to see the Family Machine in operation, so as to judge of its great capacity and beauty.

It is fast becoming as popular for family
sewing as our Manufacturing machines are
for manufacturing purposes.

The Branch Offices are well supplied with silk, twist, thread, needles, oil, &c., of the very best quality.

Be Gentle with thy Wife.

Be gentle! for thy little know

How many trials rise!

Although to thee they may be small,

To her of giant size.

Be gentle! though perchance that lip

May speak a murmuring tone,

The heart may beat in kindness yet,

And joy to be thine own.

Be gentle! for the noblest grief

At times may have some grief,

And even in a pettish word,

May seek to find relief.

Be gentle! for unkindness now

May rouse an angry storm,

That all the years of after life

In vain may strive to calm.

Be gentle! none are perfect—

Thou'rt dearer far than life;

Then, husband, bear and still forbear—

Be gentle with thy wife.

Straps.

Speaking your mind, Jerald says, is an extravagance that has ruined many a man.

The higher a man's soul rises above the world, the more freely and abundantly do his tears flow for others, as those clouds which are highest above the earth pour forth the most plentiful showers.

If laughter begets fat, it is no less true that scolding is the parent of meagreness. Who ever saw a plump termagant? The virago is scraggy. It would seem that the attraction of a fierce exacting temper, gives sharpness to the human frame as inevitably as a gritty grindstone puts a wiry edge on a broad axe.

If you fail in raising the wind abroad, that is no reason why you should kick up a breeze at home.

A very eulogistic obituary of a lady says: "She was married twenty-four years, and in all that time never once banged the door."

"Come down this instant," said the boat-swain to a mischievous son of Erin, who had been idling on the roundtop. "Come down I say, and I will give you a good dozen, you rascal!" "Troth, sir, and I would not come down if you'd give me two dozen."

"Hop up" and "Wig wag" are the appropriate names of new brands of New York whiskey.

It isn't desirable that time should mellow people who are too soft already.

Everything comes in time to him who can wait.

Revenge is a more punctual paymaster than gratitude.

The young woman who "fainted away," has been told by her family that it would be more delicate for her to faint at home.

Spring is welcomed to the trees, because they are re-leaved by its approach.

Miscellaneous.

Growler's Income Tax.

My neighbor Growler, an excitable man, by the way, was particularly excited by his "Income Tax," or, as he called it, his "War Tax." He had never liked the war—thought it unnecessary and wicked; the work of politicians. This fighting of brother against brother was a terrible thing in his eyes. If you asked him who began the war? Who struck at the nation's life? he would reply with vague generalities, made up of partisan tricky sentences, which he had learned without comprehending their just significance.

Growler came in upon me the other day, flourishing a square piece of blue writing paper, quite moved from his equanimity. There it is! Just so much robbery! Stand and deliver is the word. Pistols and bayonets! Your money and your life!

I took the piece of paper from his hand and read:

You're all right, I said, smiling.

I'd like to know what you mean by all right!

Growler was just a little offended at my way of treating this very serious matter—serious in his eyes, I mean.

I've been robbed of forty-three dollars and twenty-one cents, he continued. Do you say that it is all right? A minion of the Government has put his hand into my pocket and taken just so much of my property. Is that all right?

The same thing may be set forth in very different language, I replied. Let me state the case.

Very well—state it, said Growler, dumping himself into a chair, and looking as ill humored as possible.

Instead of being robbed, said I, you have been protected in your property and person, and guaranteed all the high privileges of citizenship for the paltry sum of forty-three dollars and twenty-one cents as your share of protection.

Oh, that's your way of putting the case, retorted Growler, dropping a little from his high tone of indignation.

Let me be more particular in my way of putting the case. Your income is from the rent of property?

What would it have cost you to defend that property from the army of General Lee, recently driven from our State by the national soldiers?

Cost me? Growler looked at me in a kind of amazement, as he thought half in jest.

Exactly! What would it have cost you? Lee, if unopposed, would certainly have reached this city and held it; and if your property had been of use to him, or any of his officers or soldiers, it would have been appropriated without so much as saying—by your leave, sir! Would forty-three dollars and twenty-one cents have covered the damage?

Perhaps not. Possibly you might have lost one half or two-thirds of all you are worth.

Growler was a trifle bewildered at this way of putting the case. He looked puzzled.

You have a store on South wharves?

Yes.

What has kept the Alabama or the Florida from running up the Delaware and burning the whole city front? Do you have forts and ships of war for the protection of your property? They are provided, and you are safe.

What is your share of the expenses for a whole year? Just forty-three dollars and twenty-one cents! It sounds like a jest?

Growler did not answer; so I kept on.

But for our immense armaments in the field and navy on the water, this rebellion would have succeeded. What then? Have you ever pondered the future of this country in such an event? Have you thought of your own position? Of the loss or gain to yourself?

How long do you think we would be at peace with England or France, if the nation was dismembered, and a hostile Confederation established on our southern border? Would your war taxes be less than now? Have you not an interest in our great army and navy, as I and every other member of the Union?

Does not your safety as well as mine lie in their existence? Are they not at this time, the conservators of every thing we hold dear as men and good citizens? Who equips and pays this army? Who builds and furnishes these ships? Where does the enormous sum of money required come from? It is the nation's work—the people aggregate in power and munificence, and so irresistible in might—unconquerable. Have you not heart-swelling of pride in this magnificent exhibition of will and strength? No part in the nation's glory? No eager hand to stretch forth?

Growler was silent still.

There was no power in you or me to check the wave of destruction that was launched by paralytic hands against us. If unresisted by the nation, as an aggregate power, it would have swept in desolation over the whole land.

Traitors in our midst, and traitors moving in arms against us, would have united to destroy our beautiful fabric of civil liberty. The government which dealt with all good citizens so kindly and gently, that not one in a thousand felt its touch beyond the weight of a feather, would have been subverted; and who can tell under what iron rule we might have fallen for a time, or how many years of strife would have elapsed before that civil liberty which ensures the greatest good to the greatest number, would have been established? But the wave of destruction was met, nay, hurled back upon our enemies who sought our ruin. We yet dwell in safety. Your property is secure. You still gather your annual income, protected in all your rights by the strong national arm. And what does the nation assess to you as your share in the cost of this security? Half your property? No! not a farthing of that income; only a small percentage of your income from that property! Just forty-three dollars and twenty-one cents! Pardon me for saying it, friend Growler, but I am more than half ashamed of you.

And seeing the way you put the case, I am more than half ashamed of myself, he answered, frankly. Why, taking your view, this is about the cheapest investment I ever made.

You certainly get more money than in any other line of expenditure. Yesterday I had a letter from an old friend living in the neighborhood of Carlisle. The rebels took from him six fine horses, worth 200 dollars apiece, six cows and oxen; and over two hundred bushels of grain. And not content with plundering him, they burnt down a barn that cost him nearly two thousand dollars. But for the army raised and equipped by the nation in support of which you and I are taxed so lightly, we might have suffered as severely. How much do you think it cost in money for the protection we have received in this particular instance.

A million dollars, perhaps?

Nearer ten million of dollars. From the time our army left the Rappahannock, until the battle of Gettysburg, its cost to Government could scarcely have been less than we have mentioned. Of this sum your proportion could scarcely have been more than three or four dollars; and for that trifling property and perhaps your life, were held secure.

No more of that, if you please, said Growler, showing some annoyance. You are running the thing into the ground. I was striking at the hand that gave me protection. If my war tax next year should be a hundred dollars, instead of forty-three, I will pay it without a murmur.

Don't say without a murmur, friend Growler.

Say gladly, as a means of safety.

Put it as you will, he answered, folding up Collector Riley's receipt, which he still held in his hand, and bowing himself out.

Not many days afterwards, I happened to hear some grumbling in my neighbor's presence about the income tax. Growler hardly waited to hear it through. My lesson was improved in his hands. In a significant phrase, he pitched into the offender, and read him a lesson so much stronger than mine, that I felt myself thrown into the shade.

You have been assessed fifty-eight dollars, he said in his excited way—fifty-eight dollars; one would think from the noise you make about it, that you had been robbed of half your property. Fifty-eight dollars for security at home and abroad. Fifty-eight dollars as your share of the expenses of defence against an enemy that, if unopposed, will desolate our homes and destroy our government! Already it has cost the nation, for your safety and mine, over a thousand million of dollars; and you are angry because it asks for your little part of the expense. Sir, you are not worthy the name of an American citizen.

That is hard talk, Growler, and I won't bear it! said the other.

It is true talk, and you will have to bear it! It was retorted. Fretting over the mean little sum of fifty-eight dollars! Why, sir, I know a man who has given his right arm in the cause; and another who has given his right leg. Do they grumble? No, sir. I never heard a word of complaint from their lips.

Thousands and tens of thousands have given their sons—and wives have given their husbands; sons and husbands who will never more return! They are with the dead. Sir, you are dishonouring yourself in the eyes of men. A grumbler over the paltry war tax; for shame.

I turned away, saying in my thoughts: so much good done! My reclaimed sinner has become a preacher of righteousness.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

HEADQUARTERS,
BOSTON, May 31st, 1864.

GENERAL ORDER, No. 17.

In anticipation of a call from the United States Government for troops to fill up the organizations in the field, the Chairman of the Selection of the several towns, and the Mayors and Aldermen in the several cities of the Commonwealth, are hereby continued as recruiting officers.

Recruits must be delivered at Faneuil Hall, Boston, or at such other places as may be hereafter designated, without expense to the State or the United States.

They will there be received into the United States Service by officers appointed for that purpose by Maj. F. N. Clarke, Chief Muster-master and Disbursing Officer for Massachusetts, where a receipt will be given for them, which will properly accredit each recruit to the quota of the city or town to which he has been assigned; or, if the municipal officers prefer it, they may deliver recruits to the Provost Marshal of the district in which they reside, who will muster them into the United States Service, and accredit them to the places to which they are assigned.

A premium of $10 for a new recruit, and $15 for a veteran who has been at least nine months in active service, will be paid by the United States, to the recruiting officer appointed for each town, and ward of cities, as soon as the recruit shall have been received at Gallop's Island, and a receipt returned to Capt. Hiram Dryer, United States Disbursing Officer, No. 2 Bulfinch Street, Boston.

Each recruit will be enlisted according to the regulations heretofore established and issued from these Headquarters, blanks for which will be furnished upon application to the Adjutant-General.

No Minor whose Parents or Guardian reside in the State, can be paid the State Bounty, without the written consent of such Parent or Guardian.

A Commissioner will be in attendance at Gallop's Island who will take the allotment of any portion of the Soldiers pay and bounty, and it will be forwarded by the Treasurer of the Commonwealth, free of expense, to the parties to whom it is allotted.

The State Bounties will be paid at Gallop's Island on at least two stated days in each week, and in all cases will be paid to the recruit himself. No orders for any portion of the Soldiers' bounty will be hereafter accepted or received by the State Paymasters.

By order of His Excellency JOHN A. ANDREWS, Governor and Commander-in-Chief.

Poetry.

Lines to the memory of James Kelly.
Who was killed at Spottsylvania, May 19, '64.

A grave at Spottsylvania—the young hero fell,
On that terrible field, Bell Plain, the doomed,
The flowers will bloom, the birds they may tell,
Than struggle with pain all through a long life;
This boy, in his beauty, with dark flashing eye,
The idol of home, so dear to them all,
Responded alike to the war bugle's cry.
His armor girded on at his country's call.

O'er his grave at Spottsylvania loved ones may weep,
The promise he gave is lost to them now;
Yet on the bright scroll his name we will keep,
All meekly resigned to the cross may they bow.
On the battle-field thus it was easier to die,
Than struggle with pain all through a long life;
May the desolate home, and the tear dim'd eye,
Be cheered when he fell, so pure in the strife.

Only three weeks; we whisper it sadly,
And our tears fell fast like the rain;
Because the angels had said so soon,
Give him back to us again.

Only three weeks—we whisper it sadly,
Since he bade us all a last farewell;
No word of greeting; his lips are mute; others must tell the story,
How he fought and won a deathless name in glory.

No more at the sound of reveille,
Shall the sleeping warrior rally;
His fight is fought, the victory won,
His labors all must cease,
For he's gone to camp by a crystal stream,
In the beautiful realm of peace.

We often miss him here at noon, at eve,
Yes, we often breathe his name, and for his absence grieve,
But, he's only one; in many a home
There stands a vacant chair;
And they miss the tones of earnest voice
When they chant the evening prayer;
Aye, many a mother's soldier son,
The same dark path hath trod,
And gone direct from the battle-field
Up to a home with God.

His grave at Spottsylvania—the place guard it well,
Oh, guard it ye trees that are forever green,
And whisper the story how bravely he fell;
Ye summits keep watch where the eagle is seen,
Oh, look of the North, with thy sheltering wing,
Lead lovingly down on this hallowed dust,
Till o'er it the songs of freedom we sing,
Till again re-united in heaven, our trust.

FRANCIS A. KELLY.

Why be Unhappy

What's the use to be unhappy,
What's the use to be fume and fret?
What's the use to look behind you,
Nursing up the vain regret?

What if life is clouded over
With its sorrows dark and wild?
What if fortune does look sternly?
Hath she never sometimes smiled?

Why, if you must taste the bitter,
Will you find the sweet away?
Fighting ever with the crosses
That you meet from day to day.

Why disquiet those around you
With complaints you should suppress—Weary those whom duty bids you Still to comfort and to bless?

Look at yonder little insect,
Sporting in the sun's bright beams;
Listen now, and hear the music
Of your laughing little streams.

Look at Nature all around you,
And above, where'er you stray;
Mute creation's ever singing!
Happy! it seems to say.

What's the use to be unhappy?
What's the use to fume and fret?
Pick up courage, laugh at trifles,
And you may be happy yet.

Anecdotes.

A noble Gascon complaining that his pumps did not last long enough, the maker asked him of what stuff his lordship would wish to have them made.

Make the pumps, said he of the throat of a chorister, the quarters of the skin of a wolf's neck, and the sole of a woman's tongue!

Crispin made bold to ask, why?

Why, you blockhead, replied the wag, because the first never admits of water; the second never bends on either side; and the last, though always in motion, never wears out.

An' Cuff, will you be after tipping us a little bit of a song this morning? exclaimed a son of the Emerald Isle to a brother of the sable race, a co-laborer in the division and sub-division of wood.

Golly, mass, I can't sing?

Can't sing? An' what's yer leg stuck in the middle of yer fat for, like a bird's, it ye can't sing?

Josey being rather remiss in his Sunday school lesson, the teacher remarked that he hadn't a very good memory. No, mahn, said he, hesitating; but I have got a first-rate forgettery.

Ah, Josey, said a sympathizing friend to a man who was just too late for the train,
you did not run fast enough.

Yes, I did, said Josey, I ran fast enough,
but I did not start soon enough.

recruiting officers.

Recruits must be delivered at Faneuil Hall,

For the Patriot.

To the Memory of

TIMOTHY SHERMAN, who was KILLED IN BATTLE NEAR SPOTTSYLVANIA COURT HOUSE, MAY 19, 1864, AGED 18 YEARS.

Where Virginia's silver waters,
Through the woods and wild flowers glide,
When our banners waved triumphant.
There the youthful soldier died.

For the cause of truth and freedom,
He had mingled in the strife;
All he had, he freely tendered—
All he had, he gave—his life.

In the din and smoke of battle,
We have heard his gallant soldier tell,
That our young and gallant soldier
Bodily fought and calmly fell.

Cenotaphs of glowing marble,
Mark the ashes of the great;
Tell of deeds of worth or valor,
In the fields of war or State.

But the little mound that rises,
O'er our soldier's silent tomb,
With no sign to mark his sleeping,
Save the wild flower's gentle bloom,—

Covers one, whose life though humble,
Ever yet moved bravely on,
And whose parting moments found him,
With his deeds of duty done.

Mourn no more for our young soldier,
Sleeping in his lonely tomb;
Heavenward has his soul ascended,
With the wild flowers sweet perfume.

Scraps.

Men are generally deserted in adversity.
When the sunsets, or their shadows refuse to follow us.

The Louisville Democrat says that the reason why gold don't come down is that the spread eagle on the coin won't let it.

In society, wholesomeness don't mix with retalls; raw wool doesn't speak to half-penny balls of worsted; yellow in the cask looks down upon silver to the pound; and pig iron turns up its nose at tennypenny nails.

When two friends part, they should lock up each other's secrets, and exchange the keys. The truly noble mind has no secrets.

It is said that some mothers have grown so affectionate, that they give their children chloroform previous to whipping them.

We are told to weigh our thoughts; most men and women would need a very small pair of scales.

A country editor, living on the line of a railroad, sent to a superintendent for a pass for himself, and added, "Please embrace my wife." The superintendent returned a pass to the editor, but declined the proposed union.

A man being assured that the sun never rose in the west, said it was very strange, as he had a cousin in Iowa who was always writing how pleasant it was in that district.
He concluded it must be all moonshine.

Conversation is a very serious matter.
There are men with whom an hour's talk will weaken one more than a day's fasting.

Miscellaneous.

Not a Story.

Mr. Jones was married. He had been married a long time, ever since he could remember, almost. The first Mrs. Jones was a pretty school-boy love, and died early. Mr.
Jones was inebriable for more than six months, and then finding the burden of his grief too heavy to be borne alone, decided to share it with a sympathizing feminine friend.
The connection was a happy one for many years, but alas for the mutability of earthly pleasures, Mr. Jones was again a widower at the age of forty, and being extremely lonely, and having the habit of marrying, he offered his broken life and bereaved affections to Miss Patience Norcross, a mature young lady of thirty.

We have said that Mr. Jones had a habit of being married, and it had so grown upon him, had Providence opened the way, he would have followed up his bereavements with a succession of consolations. But in selecting Miss Patience he had no regard to compatibility of temper. He had never thought anything about it. His other marriages had been happy accidents; and so far as he knew or reflected, that was the order of nature. But Miss Patience had a habit, too, and it was in accordance with her name, for it was the habit of endurance. It was a failing that leaned to virtue's side, and beyond
it. She lived in the remote and the future.
The present with her was never anything but a mere shift, a mere temporary expedient till better times. Distance not only lent enchantment to her objects of pursuit, but was absolutely the only charm to which she was sensitive." She really liked Mr. Jones almost up to the hour of his proposals; she meekly tolerated him ever after.

They were boarding for a time, and the wife said submissively to all her friends:
"Oh, yes, it is very comfortable for the present, until we feel able to keep house." Mr.
Jones, after the remark had been reiterated for the fifth time, asserted that he was able to keep house. To prove this, he engaged and furnished a tasteful tenement, and another year saw Miss Patience the patient mistress of her own household.

What a pleasant situation! said Dame
Grundy, as she called on a tour of inspection.
Why, yes, returned Mrs. Jones; it is all we can expect in a house we hire. If we were to build, we should plan very differently, of course; and then you know one could have the heart to make improvements in shrubbery and fruit trees. O, Mrs. Grundy, I hope to live long enough to have a house of my own.

Mr. Jones was well to do and good natured. Moreover, he was a little obtuse, as we have seen, and he did not perceive that something to put up with is with most of us a practical necessity. So he said, very generously, Mrs. Jones, in another year you shall have a house of your own.

I am afraid you cannot afford to build such a house as I would like.
I can and I will. You shall make the plan yourself, or draw a new one, if you prefer.

Mrs. Jones sighed. It will take so long in building; and from that hour every rational enjoyment was deferred until they should get into their new dwelling. There were the usual delays and disappointments, and Mrs. Jones love of endurance was fully gratified; she was regaled with a lingering sweetness long drawn out. At length the house was built and finished, the grounds laid out and planted, and the wheels of the new establishment fairly in motion. Moreover, by rare good luck, there was very little to alter or undo; most of the arrangements were desirable, and the experiments successful.

I hope, my dear, said Mr. Jones, benevolently, that we are in a condition to take comfort.

If we ever get settled, assented Mrs. Jones, with a sigh.

Well, years rolled away and they were settled. The flowers bloomed and the fruits ripened. The turf thickened into a velvet, and the trees grew tall and cast a welcome shade. Strangers paused to admire the premises as they passed, and neighbors paid their various tributes of envy and admiration. Mr.
Jones smoked his prime cigar in the back piazza, and grew to look portly and contented.
Not so with Mrs. Jones. To all the economies lavished upon her residence, she replied submissively: Yes, it's a pretty place, but we don't know who we built it for. We have no children to come after us, and are just putting up improvements for strangers to pull down.

And said Administratrix is ordered to serve this Citation by publishing the same once a week,
three weeks successively, in the Quincy Patriot,
a newspaper printed in Quincy, the last publication to be two days at least before said Court.

Witness, George White, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this Fourth day of June, in the year of our Lord, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-four.

J. H. COBB, Reg.

boy was healthy and handsome and bright.
There was no mistake about him; he was a fixed fact; a star of the first magnitude. He had wants, it is true, for which the fond father was intensely thankful, for to gratify and prevent them was his supreme delight.

And the mother? Alas! here were all a mother's cares, anxieties and forebodings.
Until he was weaned she scarcely left the house, or indulged in the simplest luxuries of diet. Then there was the long period of teeth-cutting, during which her maternal apprehensions were never appeased. Then she lived in fear of the measles, whooping cough and scarlet fever, until the young hero met and conquered them all. He grew round and rosy, and she thin and anxious, but unalterably patient. At school, she feared he might study too much or too little, and as her fears were pretty equally divided between the two perils, it is presumed that he avoided both. Then she had a general misgiving lest he should be spoiled, and from too much petting at home become an indolent and useless member of society. But though the reader may share her fears in this regard, Master Jones falsified them all. Indulgence and opportunity seemed to agree with him. He was ambitious and self-reliant, and not objectionably wilful. When at last he decided to study for a profession, the mother fitted out his wardrobe with reluctant care, and the first letter she received from college, was moistened with something more than the full proportion of her natural tears.

I am glad he is doing well, she said, in reply to a remark from her husband, but misses him more than I can tell you. Since we have only one, we could wish he could have stayed with us. The seven years of his student life are very long to wait.

To wait for what? inquired Mr. Jones.
For the good time coming, replied his wife.
Why, woman, the good time has come, long ago. Can't you see it? We've been having it all along.

It may be so with you, Mr. Jones, but I have never been free from anxiety for a minute in all my life.

And never will be, my dear, replied Mr.
Jones, and he shook the ashes from his cigar.
It is positively your strongest point, and I have quite an admiration for your skill in it.
You will find more to submit to in any given circumstances than any woman I have ever known.

Mrs. Jones raised her eyes to her husband in mock surprise. She forgave and was silent.

The Right Principle.

A colored sentinel was recently marching on his beat in the streets of Norfolk, (Va.)
when a white man passing by shouldered him casually off the sidewalk, quite into the street. The soldier, on recovering himself, called out:

White man, halt!
The white man, Southern-like, went on,
cocked it, and hailed again:
White man, halt, or I'll fire!

The white man hearing shouted in the tone,
halted and faced about.

White man, continued the sentry, peremptorily, come here.

He did so.

White man, said the soldier, again, me no care one cent 'bout this particular Cuffee; but white man bound to respect dis uniform, (striking his breast.) White man move on.

Old Things.

Give me the old songs, those exquisite bursts of melody which thrilled the lyres of the inspired poets and minstrels of long ago.
Every note has borne on the air a tale of joy and rapture—of sorrow and sadness!

They tell of days gone by, and time hath given them a voice which speaks to us of those who once breathed these melodies—of what they now are, and what we soon shall be.

My heart loves those melodies; may they be mine to hear till life shall end, and as I
"launch my boat" upon the sea of eternity, may their echoes be wafted to my ear, to cheer me on my passage from the scenes of earth and earth land!

Give me the old paths, where we have wandered and culled the flowers of love and friendship in the days of "Auld Lang Syne;" sweeter, far the dolls whose echoes have answered to our voices; whose turf is not a stranger to our footsteps, and whose rills have in childhood's days reflected back our forms, and those of our merry playfellows, from whom we have parted, and meet no more in the old nooks we loved so well.—
May the old paths be watered with Heaven's own dew, and be green forever in my memory!

Give me the old house, upon whose stairs
we seem to hear light footsteps, and under whose porch a merry laugh seems to mingle with the winds that whistle through old trees, beneath whose branches lie the graves of those who once trod the halls, and made the chambers ring with glee. And O! above all, give me the old friends—beasts bound to mine in life's sunshiny hours, and a link so strong that all the storms of earth might not break it asunder,—spirits congenial, whose hearts through life have thrrobbed in unison with our own! O, when death shall still this heart,

I would not ask for aught more sacred to hallow my dust, than the tear of an old friend.
May my funeral dirge be chaunted by the old friends I love so fondly, who have not yet passed away to the spirit's bright home!

From the Army of the Potomac.

WHITE HOUSE LANDING, (Va.)
JUNE 6th, 1864.

To the Publisher of the Patriot:
I take the opportunity to direct a few lines to you. I have seen a great deal of hard marching, and at times been without rations for twenty-four hours at a time. But to overlook all that, it is nothing compared with the lives of our poor soldiers. Our Regiment suffered terribly, in the Wilderness battle; and at the Spottsylvania Court House fight we had two of our officers killed, besides four lieutenants wounded, and a great many privates killed and wounded. In Friday and Saturday's fighting, we have lost in killed of the officers, Major Ewer, Captain Upham, Captain McFarland, and Captain Crossman, wounded badly. The Colonel had one rib broken, but is on his horse again. Lieutenant Folger is wounded and has had a leg amputated. Lieutenant Alma wounded, and that is as far as we can learn. About one hundred and fifty of the Regiment remain under command of Captain Churchill. Last night, about eight and nine o'clock, very sharp and heavy cannonading was heard in the direction of the Chickahominy; we think the rebels tried hard to break our lines.

White House Landing is a very large plain, indeed, and it is entirely covered with hospital tents; thousands and thousands of them, and the wounded coming in by the same numbers. The river here, for one mile, is one of the prettiest sights I ever saw; hundreds of transports, gun boats, barges and schooners, are binging in supplies and carrying away wounded men all the time. Our Band, with four others, and about two thousand sick, together with six companies of the Invalid Corps, had a very pleasant trip from Port Royal to this place by water, a distance of three hundred miles. Four steamers, and attached to our steamers, were four barges, loaded with troops and supplies; six gun boats, barges and pontoons in any quantity. I have seen Fredericksburg and Port Royal evacuated. Our pontoons were taken up, and the whole fleet sailed down the Rappa hammock, bidding adieu to old Port Royal, and our gun boats shelling the woods on both sides of the river as we passed down. Once in a while we would pass a splendid old rebel plantation, with a nice house on the river's bank, and you would see a half dozen shells from our gun boats go whistling through the house. We crossed the Chesapeake bay in a terrible thunder storm, on Thursday afternoon and evening, June 2d. I have heard a great deal about being out to sea in a thunder storm, but never witnessed it before. It was very rough and rained in torrents at that time. Our Band was on one of the barges attached to our steamer, servicing the officers, and were obliged to stay there on an open decked barge that night in all the rain; rather tough, but we came out all right next morning, and landed here, all safe.

We have about two thousand prisoners here besides our quarters, and every thing seems to be all life. They are repairing the railroad track from here on towards Richmond, and have got a new engine by the name of Lieut. General Grant.

Respectfully yours,
F. P. LOUD, Leader 53th Band.

Our Presidents.

George Washington, of Virginia, was President of the United States for eight years;
John Adams, of Massachusetts, was President for a single term of four years; Thomas Jefferson, of Virginia, was President for eight years; James Madison, of ditto, eight years;
James Monroe, ditto, eight years; John Quincy Adams, of Massachusetts, four years;
Andrew Jackson, of Tennessee, eight years;
Martin Van Buren, of New York, four years;
William Henry Harrison, of Ohio, one month;

John Tyler, of Virginia, three years eleven months; James K. Polk, of Tennessee, four years; Zachary Taylor, of Louisiana, one year and four months; Millard Fillmore, of New York, two years and eight months;
Franklin Pierce, of New Hampshire, four years; and James Buchanan, of Pennsylvania, seven years. It will be seen that during the seventy-two years which elapsed between the inauguration of George Washington, and the incoming administration of Abraham Lincoln, the slave States of the Union have had their citizens occupying the Presidential chair for forty-nine years and three months; while the free States have had the same honor conferred upon their citizens, for twenty-two years and nine months, considerably less than one-third of the entire period.

A Disputed Question.

An old toper, after indulging quite freely in his accustomed beverage, amused himself in teasing a mettlesome horse. The animal, not fancying his familiarities, suddenly reared,
and the disciple of Bacchus found himself sprawling in an adjacent mud-puddle. Gathering himself up as quickly as his situation would allow, he shouted to his son, who was standing by:

John, did you see me kick that ere horse?
Why, no, dad, the horse kicked you.
Reckon not, John. One or t'other of us got badly biated. 'Tain't me, John, for I'm here.

To Clean Paint that is not Varnished.

Put upon a plate some of the best whiting;
have ready some clean warm water and a piece of flannel, which dip into the water and squeeze nearly dry; then take as much whiting as will adhere to it, apply it to the paint, when a little rubbing will instantly remove any dirt or grease; wash it well with water, and rub dry with a soft cloth. Paint thus cleaned looks equal to new, and, with out doing the least injury to the most delicate color, it will preserve the paint much longer than if cleaned with soap; and it does not require more than half the time usually occupied in cleaning.

Something Forgotten.

A fashionable dressed lady entered a horse car, a few evenings since, and after she had stood for some minutes a young gentleman rose and gave her his seat. She made no acknowledgment of this act of courtesy. The cars stopped at an upper station on the river, and the lady was about to leave the cars,
when a quaint old Dutch gentleman called to her, "Madam you have forgotten something." "Why, sir?" said the lady. "Why, you have forgotten to thank the young man for your seat." The lady waited out and the young man resumed his sitting.

So long as a woman inspires love, she is not old. If a woman preserves the attractions of youth until she reaches the age of one hundred, she will be younger than the woman of twenty who wants them.

New Books.

CHRISTIAN MEMORIALS OF THE WAR;
12mo; 259 pp; Gould & Lincoln. Professor Hackett has done a noble work in compiling this volume. It will have a permanent value as a record of the patriotism, bravery, and the religious faith of our soldiers. There are one hundred and thirty-three, brief, thrilling narratives, mostly of the camp, the battlefield and hospital. We very much doubt whether these memorials of heroism, in all their marvelous power and beauty, can find a parallel in the literature of any age. They should be in the hands of all, specially our young men, for they cannot fail to kindle the faith, the patriotism and piety of all who peruse them.

STANLEY'S DEVICES; 12mo; 312 pp; Gould & Lincoln. If there be any in these days who doubt the personality and power of the Devil they should examine this work. It is not a dry disquisition, but a fresh, interesting and practical view of the Biblical teachings on the subject; an invaluable aid to all who desire "to fight the good fight of faith."

LIGHT AND SHADE; 16mo; 264 pp; Henry Holt. This is a record of the diversified experiences of a Pastor's wife. Her childhood, her conversion, betrothal and marriage, with various scenes at the parsonage and in the parish are sketched with life-like distinctions.
The writer excels in her vivid portraiture of character, and has succeeded well in making the narrative a vehicle of most important truth.

Poetry.

For the Patriot.
The Sword of Putnam.

In the hour of our gloom, scores of winters ago,
When the banner of freedom began to unfold,
And its cluster of stars through the clouds dimly shone,
Which shrouded our homes in those seasons of old;
Struggling on—lifting upwards—unheeding alarms,
The cause of the free, roused the true and the brave,
And manhood sprang proudly and nobly to arms,
Our rights to defend and our country to save.
On Bunker's bold height—on the Isle by the sea,
Our Putnam's stern troops were in battle arrayed—
Where the conflict raged wildest—where danger might be,
There waved his dark plume and there flashed his bright blade.
And right was triumphant—our gallant sires rest
By the mound and the sea and awaken no more;
Unheeding—the golden sun sinks in the west,
Unheeding—the created waves roll to the shore.
"Where's the old hero's sword?" through many a year,
All shrouded and rusting it hung in the hall;
No traitor disturbed its calm quietude here,
No foreign foe started its rest on the wall.
But dark days have come—treason, daughter of crime,
And traitors would crush what our fathers would save,
And the liberty earned by their blood, toil and time,
The faithful would sink in a bottomless grave.
But the race of the valiant still lives in the land,
Their blood in their children exultingly flows,
The courage—the nerve—in the heart and the hand,
Is earnest to strike against Liberty's foes.
We shall fight, we shall triumph—the sword of the sires,
Are grasped by the hands of the fearless and true,
Their bosoms are blazing with Liberty's fires,
With bold hearts to dare and with stout arms to do.
We shall fight, we shall triumph—o'er the dying and dead,
The old hero's blade in bright flashes is gleaming;
By his kinsman's arm borne, while the blue and white and red,
Emblazoned with stars in victory streaming,
We shall fight—we shall triumph, and proudly will speak,
Of the fields which our soldiers by valor have won;
And bless the brave heart, weary, wounded and weak,
Who still to the charge led so steadily on.
We shall fight, we shall triumph—the wilderness past,
Our pathway is onward—our glory is near;
"Where's the old hero's sword?" and a voice on the blast
From the battle field shouts—"It is here!"

Anecdotes.

How are you John? I'm deuced glad to see you.
Very well, Charley.
Come and take a drink old fellow. 'Tisn't often we meet.
That's a fact, John—and when we do it's meet and drink.

Reply, sir, said a judge to a blunt old Quaker, who was on the stand. Do you know what he said here for?
Yes, verily I do, said the Quaker; three of you for four dollars each day, and the fat one in the middle for one thousand a year.

A missionary in London was recently riding on the outside of a cab, and told the driver that he had been in China. Cabbies were much interested and promptly asked: Are they a civilized like people about there, sir; do they take their gin of a morning?

A young lady, whose name was Patty, being addressed by a Mr. Cake, accepted him on condition he would change his name, declaring she would never consent to be called a Patty Cake.

A foppish fellow advised a friend not to marry a poor girl, as he would find matrimony, with poverty, up hill work.
Good, said his friend, I would rather go up hill than down hill, any time.

A mother told her little boy to pray that all his old naughty sins might be taken away. He complied, and prayed as follows:
O Lord, take away all my old, naughty sins, and give me some good new ones.
His mother didn't see it in that light.

Me, who is a postage stamp like a bad scholar?
I can't tell, my son; why is it?
Because it gets licked and put in a corner.
Susan, put that boy to bed.

A blundering compositor, in setting up the toast: "Woman, without her, man would be a savage," got the punctuation in the wrong place, which made it read: "Woman, without her man, would be a savage." The mistake was not discovered until the editor's wife undertook to read the proof.

Something Left Undone

Labor with what zeal we wish,

Something still remains undone;

Something, uncompleted still,

Waits the rising of the sun.

By the bedside, on the stair,

At the threshold, near the gates,

With its menace or its prayer,

Like a mendicant it waits.

Wait, and will not go away—

Wait, and will not be gain-said,

By the cares of yesterday

Each to-day is heavier made.

Till at length it is, or seems,

Greater than our strength can bear—

As the burden of our dreams,

Pressing on us everywhere.

And we stand from day to day

Like the dwarfs of times gone by

Who as Northern legends say,

On their shoulders held the sky.

Scraps.

PLAIN BAKED BREAD PUDDING: Pound

rusked bread fine; to five heaping tablespoonful of it put a quart of milk, three beaten eggs, three table-spoonful of rolled sugar, a teaspoonful of salt, half a nutmeg,

and three table-spoonful of melted butter.

Bake it about an hour. It does not need any sauce.

CAUTION. Now mind you, said a servant girl to her neighbor, I don't say as how miserous drinks; but between you and I, the ce-center don't keep full all day.

Socrates was asked why he had built himself so small a house, and replied: "Small as it is, I wish I could fill it with friends."

Funeral bells are the door bells of the other world, and grave stones mark the boundaries between this and that.

Consider three things when tempted to sin:

There is an eye that sees thee; there is an ear that hears thee; all thy actions are recorded in a book.

It is a paradox that loose habits stick tighter to a fellow than any other kind, and in fact, that tight people very often wear them. But getting tight is the tightest fit one can get.
